Key Club Week Proclaimed At Senior High

Cannon Mills Doffer In Tournament Finals

Randy Teal of Cannon Mills' Plant No. 4 in Kannapolis advanced to the finals of the National Superdoffer Tournament with a victory in the semi-finals Monday at his home plant.

Teal defeated Walter Capps of Burlington Industries' Asheville Weaving Plant by a total of 4.1 minutes in the filling competition.

Teal will now compete in the national finals against the Avondale Mills representative, James Cleveland of Alexander City, Ala.

The dates for the finals have not been determined yet, but Teal will go to the Avondale Mills plant in Alexander City, Ala., for three frames and Cleveland will come to Kannapolis for three in the final round.

The semi-finals were scheduled for Friday, Cannon lodged a protest against Capps and the round was postponed until Monday. The American Textile Manufacturing Institute up-held the Cannon protest, and Capps completed his final round Monday.

The national runner-up will get $800, and the national champion will get $1,600.

Cannon's warp doffer Grady Burr of Concord was defeated Saturday, November 17.

Daring Young Men On Their Winning Machines

Mark, 11, left, and Scott, 8, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Loren Edwards of River Road, are having the fun of their young lives—and gaining recognition in the bargain. They are competing in motorcycle events throughout the Southeast, and they are winning. Their latest outing was November 23-25 at Jacksonville, Fla. where they were among 492 young cyclists in the Second Annual Minicycle Winter Nationals at the North Florida Speedway. Youngsters from 40 states were represented in the various events. Mark finished in second place in overall competition in the 0-to-80 cc modified class, and he placed fourth overall in the 100 cc category. Scott, who competes in the 0-to-60 cc class, came home with a third place trophy for his showing in stock events. Three weeks ago, Mark placed first in Columbia and first in Atlanta on consecutive days, and Scott placed among the top five in both rallies.

Patrol Will Reduce Its Speed, Too

North Carolina Highway Patrol Cmdr. E. W. Jones says "every effort" will be made to reduce the patrol's gasoline consumption 20-25 per cent to aid in the national energy crisis.

Jones said in an interview Friday the patrol will reduce its speed to 50 miles per hour and "avoid fast take-offs, turns, etc., except in those instances necessary in the pursuit of violators."

A memorandum outlining the gasoline conservation program has been prepared and will be put into effect in a few days, Jones said.

Gov Jim Holshouser recently ordered that the maximum speed limit in North Carolina be lowered to 55 miles per hour in a move to conserve fuel during the national crisis. Enforcement is scheduled to begin December 1.

Jones said that during the first 10 days troopers will issue warning tickets "to those motorists exceeding the newly lowered speed limit but whose speed is not in excess of the previous maximum limit."
