

Creative Arts Center Staffers Attend Workshop

The staff of the Creative Arts Center at the Woods Elementary School—Miss Page, Mrs. West and Mr. Kline—spent Friday, October 5, in Raleigh where they attended a drama workshop sponsored by the Division of Languages of the State Department of Public Instruction.

The workshop was held in the Frank Thompson Theatre on the campus of the North

Safety Good

Rule For Everyone

BY PATTY SITES
Mareeba Club

Safety is a good rule for all of us. Many children do not obey the safety rules and many times they are hurt and sometimes killed because they become careless.

I am only nine years old and this is my first year as a 4-H member. During this past year, I have learned a lot about safety. Let me tell you how I tried to share with other boys and girls the things I learned.

One of the things we had often talked about at my house was the way boys and girls behaved on school buses. The noise and the bad manners made the buses unsafe. My mother helped me to prepare a demonstration which we hoped would show boys and girls how to make school buses safer by having good manners.

My demonstration was about two school buses—their names were George and Sam. One bus was a happy bus and the other was unhappy. The happy bus had good boys and girls. They were quiet and didn't distract the driver. The other bus, the sad one, had noisy, pushy passengers. The story had a happy ending because the sad bus took the advice of the happy bus and one day just refused to move until the boys and girls changed their ways—and they did. I had posters to illustrate my story and the members of my 4-H club enjoyed it and the boys and girls of my third grade class enjoyed it, too.

During this past year, I have learned about fire safety, safety in the home and safety at pools and beaches. It was especially important for me to know about safety at pools because this past summer we were able to enjoy the pool that my father installed in our backyard. My parents taught us that we must never swim alone, not to swim immediately after eating and not to go beyond our abilities.

The day was climaxed with a performance of an old-time melodrama by the University Players after which the teachers and students returned to their respective homes filled with new enthusiasm for their work, countless ideas to experiment with in their classes and inspiration enough to last the rest of the year.

Powell Seeks Re-Election; Other Troutman Candidates File

Troutman Mayor Loren Q. Powell today announced he would seek re-election and three more candidates entered the race for seats on the Troutman Board of Aldermen, bringing to two the number of candidates for the office of mayor and seven who are seeking the three seats on the board of aldermen.

The day was filled with a variety of offerings from 8:30 a.m. through 4:45 p.m. with little time for lunch and most of this spent talking over individual questions with the various consultants.

Patsy Clark from UNC-Asheville was first on the program and she used some of the students and teachers present to demonstrate the art of Choral Speaking. The next session was on Choreography and was led by Lynda Warren, Dance Consultant for the Division of Cultural Arts of the State Department of Public Instruction.

Lynda Warren then had a second session on Choreography in which she went into greater detail on how one might select students for the dance parts, find out what they could do and then develop the choreography for the show using the suggestions and talents of the dancers themselves.

The day was climaxed with a performance of an old-time melodrama by the University Players after which the teachers and students returned to their respective homes filled with new enthusiasm for their work, countless ideas to experiment with in their classes and inspiration enough to last the rest of the year.

New Car Comes With Keller's New Keys

Bob Keller, center, is presented keys to a brand-new Vega by Harold McEachern, co-owner of Mac Victor Electronic Supply. Keller is owner of Keller Sight and Sound, a Mooresville television sales and service company. He was declared winner of the car following a sales promotion conducted by Mac Victor in cooperation with Antenna Designs, a television antenna manufacturing firm in Burlington, Iowa. The promotion was conducted among Mac Victor customers throughout the Piedmont. The firm has stores in Concord, Statesville and High Point. Others from left are Leo Barker, sales manager of Antenna Designs; Phil Mills, co-owner of Mac Victor; and Morris Mot-singer Jr. of Kernersville, a district sales representative for the antenna firm.

Stewart, 45, of West Avenue, Troutman, is general manager of Pich, Inc. A native of Turner Falls, Mass., he graduated from the University of Massachusetts in 1953 with a B.S. degree in poultry science. He also completed a program for management development at Harvard University Business School.

He and his wife, the former Anna Mae Leascher from Pennsylvania, have six children.

Stewart is a member of the Troutman Lions Club and First United Methodist Church in Troutman.

"I think Troutman is a growing town and I'd like to help see that this growth is planned," said Stewart in announcing his candidacy.

Deadline for candidates to file for municipal office in Troutman is October 12 at noon. Deadline for voter registration is Monday, October 8, at the Iredell County Board of Elections, 100 E. Main St., in Statesville.

The current board of aldermen is composed of Brown, E. O. Wincott, Jr., and G. George Beall.

Candidates elected will serve two-year terms.

Cindy Rimmer Finds Shortcourse Interesting

By CINDY RIMMER
Troutman

It was interesting to note that even though parts of the United States differ, the people everywhere. One thing that really impressed me was the harmony that existed between the 4-Hers. There wasn't a color difference at all. Blacks and whites shared rooms and lived together in harmony. We were like a big, happy family.

I think the most important thing I learned were: how the United States government really means, and that if we really want to we can get along together and make this country a better place. We were like a big, happy family.

We returned home on Saturday afternoon, July 30, from a day of fun and games. It was the greatest week in my life. I'll never forget it. I don't believe what I learned and experienced during that one short week. I was tired, but I've never enjoyed a trip so much.

The Statesville Rotary Club sponsors this trip for the 4-Hers. It is really great to know that this country who are trying to do things to better this country and not hinder its progress.

'Dude', Best Of Show, And His Master

"Dude", a redbone hound, took best of show honors in the youth dog show at the Iredell County Fair. Winner of two trophies, cash and ribbons at the fair.

Teenage girls, looking ahead to marriage and a home of their own, realize that learning to cook is most important. Cynthia Hooper, 17, who is enrolled in the 4-H cooking project, gives pointers to several other members of the Shun-ville 4-H Club. Standing from left, are: Francella Harris, Glyn Pfister, Tena Daye and Sharon Harris.
