New Fashion Look Completed For All Girl Scout Age Groups

Girl Scouts of the Mooresville Neighborhood now are featuring their new "dressed for action" fashions in uniforms for pre-teen Junior and teenage Cadette scouts.

For girls aged nine through 11 the new Junior uniform gives a choice of 12 individual looks, from a formal dress to casual pants outfits—all official.

The interchangeable parts of the new Junior Girl Scouts uniform include a kicky A-line jumper, smooth-fitting pants, cool patch pocket shorts—all in leaf green woven polyester blend fabric—a contrasting forest green ribbed nylon stretch bodysuit, and a crisp white blouse with printed green trefoil stripes. Accent colors show up in a bright red V-tab tie, a shiny reversible green and red belt and matching belt purse.

To proudly display insignia, there's a newly designed narrower contoured badge sash, made to stay in place. The back of the sash may be used for personal emblems. The same perky dark green Girl Scout beret completes the outfit.

For Cadette Girl Scouts, the uniform has six interchangeable separates: a smart-looking, easy-fitting A-line jumper, sleek matching pants, a short tunic over-blouse—all in dark green rib knit permanent press material—a long-sleeve soft yellow blouse printed with lemony trefoil stripes, a bright yellow ribbed stretch nylon bodysuit, and a dark green felt vest to take on all official insignia. The back of the vest can be adorned with colorful personal-choice patches. A dark green beret with the Cadette cockade and a dark green V-tab tie complete the picture.

Since 1912, when Girl Scouts of the U. S. A. was founded, Girl Scout uniforms have undergone many changes. Fashions ranged from the original navy middy blouse and skirt, to the 1914 knaki dress and the 1928 introduction of the "greens", plus the various style modifications in the '40s and '60s.

This latest change had its start four years ago when the national organization invited suggestions from Girl Scouts across the country, asking their preferences. A recurrent theme that came through was pants-pants-pants, no waistline, big pockets, a neat sporty "uniform" look made identifiable with Girl Scouts insignia, and most of all easy-care fabrics.

In spring 1971, new Adult and Senior Girl Scout uniforms were brought out, and in spring 1973, Brownies got their new uniform. The introduction of the new Junior and Cadette uniforms this fall now completes the whole new fashion look for all Girl Scout age groups.
