needs, and

"Whereas, the Governor of North Carolina and the State Superintendent of Public Instruction have endorsed a favorable vote on this issue as being needed for the improvement of public education, and the State Treasurer has endorsed the issue as being fiscally sound for the State as well as being needed for the improvement of public education, and

"Whereas, the funds, when authorized, will be distributed to the local school systems on the basis of student membership and in accordance with the provisions of the enabling legislation, the Mooreville City Schools being allocated $640,450.

"Now, therefore, be it resolved: That the Mooreville City Board of Education support the $300 million Capital Facilities Bond Referendum for Schools and urge the people of Mooreville to work for and vote for this issue so as to help alleviate the problem of money in eradicating the facility problems which exist here. The Board of Education further expresses appreciation to Representative Lane Brown of Stanley County and his committee as a favorable vote is sought on November 6, 1973."

Can Your Budget Stand A 26.5% Tax Increase?

If the Mt. Mourne School is merged with the Mooreville School System every taxpayer in the Mt. Mourne School District will pay, under the current rates, 26.5% more taxes. There are many elderly people living on small Social Security income and cannot afford additional tax burdens.

Graham

Graham, son of Mr. and Mrs. James T. Graham of Cleveland, doesn't think the situation concerning the governor's race will firm up until after the 1974 elections when there will be a possible race for the U. S. Senate.

But Graham likes to keep his name before the public. Now 52, he has been commissioner of agriculture since 1964, when he was appointed by former Gov. Terry Sanford to succeed L. Y. (Stag) Ballentine.

He was out of his office in Raleigh today and could not be contacted for further comments on the political talk involving him.

Aging

"The Council for the Aging is being formed under guidelines of the North Carolina Governor's Coordinating Council on Aging. It seeks to improve and promote the welfare of older people. It aims to provide transportation, to get food stamps, to buy groceries, to get medical attention, to secure home services and, in sum, to help old and often infirm people care for themselves.

"The council also will seek to provide enrichment services by enabling the elderly to develop their talents through their attendance at various workshops under competent teachers in such skills as weaving, painting, ceramics and needlepoint. These workshops also will enable our elderly citizens to meet others, and to build personal relationships so vital to wholesome life.

"We see the council as a tangible, functioning evidence that in Iredell County older people are being provided opportunities to lead active, rewarding lives as citizens in a world open to their talents and responsive to their needs."

Lincoln Native Uses Education From CVTI To Make White House

Clyde T. Brown has risen fast and far in the White House organization, but he believes it was his prior knowledge of the Watergate incident or its cover-up.

But he's learned quite a bit about apple sauce and vinegar. A 1965 graduate of Catawba Valley Technical Institute, Brown took only 2 1/2 years to advance through the ranks of the National Fruit Products Co. to become its president.

In case you haven't guessed by now, the National Fruit Products Co. makes White House brand products, including apple sauce and vinegar.

Brown, who earned a two-year associate degree in agricultural business at CVTI, is presently supervising construction of the first phase of a new 24,000-square-foot White House plant here.

By the time Watergate is finally cleared up, his plant will be ready for occupancy within a month, and that these dwelling units should provide welcome relief for Mooreville Mills' new employees.

Following the training period, he went to work as an assistant field representative for the company, purchasing raw fruit.

His first promotion made him foreman over the night shift labeling department; his second made him general foreman in charge of bottling, vinegar processing and labeling.

It was at this point that Brown started to move in the company organization, bypassing many individuals who had "more education" than he had. He was elevated above some even who possessed master's degrees in one subject or another.

In January, 1972, he became night superintendent of the Winchester plant, a job which lasted only six months—because he was promoted again, this time as assistant plant manager of the huge headquarters division.

Ten months later, in April of this year, he packed his bags and headed back to Lincoln County to build and manage National Fruit's seventh plant.

types and amount of waters. "Personally, I feel Iredell County could do a lot worse than in Marine World. It'd be a sizeable investment in the county, and I do not feel the development would have as great an impact on our town as some people in our area is inevitable, and we are making every effort to keep it orderly.

Two years ago, for example, we began work on getting the state to four-lane N.C. 150 west of town. We know development is coming, it's just a question of how soon and how much."

Davis says Marine World cannot treat its own waste, nor provide its own water. The development will include 20 acres devoted to water mammal shows featuring porpoises, killer whales and sea lions, and motels, restaurants and shops are planned along the 1,500 feet frontage of the property on N. 150. The developers are talking in terms of a $8 million to $10 million initial investment.

Cost of extending Mooreville water and sewer lines to the development probably would exceed $250,000. Mooreville does not bear the expense of utility installation outside town. The county's policy is that of participating up to 70 per cent in the cost of providing utilities in rural areas, provided the user's base is large enough to reimburse the county over 10 years.

Apparently, Mooreville is ready to provide the service if Marine World and the county government will install the lines.

Young Bikers On Sidewalk; Walkers Have Right Of Way

Okay kids — and you adult bicycle riders as well — the Town Board would like a word with you.

First, you must remember to obey rules of the road. You haven't been doing too good a job of that. The police are concerned about the safety hazards created by the town's growing number of bikes, and the widespread disregard of traffic regulations by bicycle riders compounds the risk.

Monday night, the Town Board heard a report from a committee that has studied the bike situation, and the board adopted two amendments to existing laws covering bike operation.

Because of the number of children on local streets who insist on peddling their two-wheelers on the left side of the street, zigzagging back and forth, and in general, making themselves extremely vulnerable to motorists, the board has agreed to let youngsters 11 years old and under ride on sidewalks.

This is an amendment to a law prohibiting sidewalk biking. The children may ride on the sidewalk provided they give pedestrians the right of way. And also providing they ride only during daylight. And provided they recognize off-limit sidewalks on Main Street, on the east side between McNeely and Catawba avenues, and on the west side from Statesville to Center avenues.

The board also decreed it is unlawful to ride a bicycle at a fast speed without a front light visible for 300 feet, and a rear light or reflector visible for 200 feet.

Police Chief Lloyd Shumake told the board he plans to hold free bicycle registration clinics, and to conduct bike safety programs in local schools.

Following the training period, he went to work as an assistant field representative for the company, purchasing raw fruit.

His first promotion made him foreman over the night shift labeling department; his second made him general foreman in charge of bottling, vinegar processing and labeling.

Thinking Of Buying Land In Some Far-Off Place? Investigate First

How?????

1. Ask the nearest Better Business Bureau for a report on the company.
2. Ask the land developer for a property report, which is required by Federal law. It must provide such information as the terms of the sale; the distance by road to the nearest towns; mortgages and liens, taxes and assessments, restrictions, easements, and covenants on the property; need, if any, for drainage before the land is usable; accessibility to the lots by roads or highways; other vital facts. If the developer refuses to furnish the report, don't buy.
3. Find out from the Federal Office of Interstate Land Sales Registration, Washington, D. C. 20411 (created by Congress because of widespread landsale abuses) if any complaints have been filed against the company.
4. Visit the property. If the salesman tries to discourage you from going, don't buy. When you're there, try to get more information than the company gives you. Ask real estate brokers and other local people.
5. Before signing a contract, ask your lawyer to check it carefully.
6. Don't be hurried into buying because you're told the price is going up, the lots are going fast, or you're missing a great opportunity if you don't act now. Many land development
