larceny charge was lodged against Smith after he admitted stealing other merchandise from the wholesale firm during his two months employment there.

This merchandise, Deputy Cook reported, included a radio, a tape player, an FM tuner, with a total value of approximately $100. Smith is being held in the county jail under bond of $700. According to Deputy Cook, the $204-$88.73 in cash and a $116 check—had been hidden in a milk carton in the weeds near Four Winds Fish Camp, three miles south of Mooreville, just west of U. S. Highway 21.

cost of the kit. Direct appeals to county business and industry also would be made. Reavis said $3,000 was raised through direct solicitation during the short-term campaign, and that "between $3,000 and $4,000" drug information kits were obtained for the county by the council.

"We distributed these kits at our booth at the fair," the sheriff said, "we began on Monday and we ran out by Wednesday. I wish we had had four times as many kits. The people seemed to appreciate them."

Reavis said the National Drug Abuse Council, an Atlanta, Ga.-based non-profit corporation, lost money in its first effort. He said the kits distributed cost more than the money raised.

The sheriff said the Iredell County Drug Abuse Committee, which is made up of a cross-section of county government, civic, religious and law enforcement interests, now has no connection whatever with the National Drug Abuse Council.

"I do feel the committee can do some useful work in our fight against drugs," he said, "and I'm going to call the committee together and we're going to work out some positive action for Iredell County."

Avenue, and in the beautifully wooded area.

Some land preparation is required at both sites, with more extensive landscaping necessary at Willow Valley.

Sizable parking lots, picnic shelters, outdoor cooking facilities, and restrooms are planned at both parks.

Specifically, these facilities will be among those provided at Willow Valley: tennis courts, basketball, or multi-purpose courts, three picnic sites, three shelters, three areas for younger children, each with a variety of playground equipment, five horseshoe pits and a nature trail.

At Liberty Park, the entrance off Iredell to the ball field will be moved to the Church Street edge of the property, where a 77-space parking lot will be built. Planned in this area are picnic facilities, the "hot lots" and two multi-purpose courts.

which will reduce the standing of non-connecting roads under the new system.

Much stress in the new rating system is also given to how a road which is proposed to be paved fits into the overall county thoroughfare plan. Highway officials believe this will be conducive to a more orderly system of developing a county's road system.

Copies of the new rating sheets have been distributed to counties throughout the state, Jack Murdock, state secondary roads officer, said.

After priority figures have been established, then members of the council will discuss secondary road paving plans with the boards of commissioners within their areas before a schedule is adopted.

Leadership Training School Set

Area III Leadership Training School for the Women of the Church of Christ Presbytery will be held on Sunday afternoon, September 23, 2:30-5:00 o'clock at the Second Presbyterian Church in Concord, North Carolina.

This is an annual event for the training of new officers who will be assuming their duties in October. The 1973-74 Presbyterian Women's Workbook will be discussed. Theme for the school is "Accept Perseverance."

The Rev. Crawford A. White, pastor of the hostess church, will have the invocation. Mrs. R. J. Underwood, president, will welcome the group. Special music will be presented by Mrs. John Motherhead, who will sing "Happiness Is The Lord," accompanied by Miss Janie Goodnight.

Teachers will be Mrs. Homer L. Friday, Jr., Kannapolis; Mrs. Ira Dayvault, Concord; Mrs. Jack Ransom, Lincolnton; Mrs. Julian Nesslerodt, Concord; Mrs. Anna McNeely, Mt. Ulla; and Mrs. J. S. Johnston Jefferson.

Area III officers are: chairman, Mrs. Bess B. Keller; personal faith and family life, Mrs. John F. McGinnis; Christian community action, Mrs. J. L. Alexander; leadership and resources, Mrs. Julian Nesslerodt; and ecumenical mission and relations, Mrs. Robert Underwood.

The 19 churches and their presidents included in Area III are: Bayless Memorial, Mrs. Margie Love, Bethpage, Mrs. J. S. Johnston Jefferson.

Mrs. Loftin Passes In California

Mrs. Catherine Fleming Loftin, 38, of Upland, Calif., died in that city as a result of an accident early Tuesday morning. She was the wife of Frank Loftin, a native and former resident of Mooreville.

Details of the tragedy were unknown here at mid-morning Wednesday.

Mrs. Loftin was a daughter of Mrs. Henry Loftin of Davidson, N.C., and the late Mr. Loftin. She was a graduate of the Lowrance Hospital School of Nursing.

The Loftins had resided in California about two years. Survivors, in addition to the husband and mother, include seven brothers.

Memory Chemical Development

What a boon to lazy learners if memories were molecules that could be isolated and copied! Then anyone could gain a mathematician's facility or a poet's grace by popping a pill—or to the fantasy boss.

No wonder reports of molecules that transfer learning between laboratory rats and human beings are so common. The imagination. The sensational nature of the topic has transformed some rather hazy lab results into a bitter scientific dispute, to say nothing of sparking news reports of possible knowledge pills.

Pharmacologist A. Goldstein of Stanford University thinks the vaunted memory molecules may have only a druglike effect that has little to do with memory or learning.

George Ungar and colleagues at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston, Tex., have made the most celebrated studies in the field.

They give rats a choice between a brightly lit maze or a darkened box into which to retreat. If a rat follows its natural preference for darkness, it receives an electric shock. It then has to go into the illuminated chamber.

Dr. Ungar claims to have isolated a chemical in these rats that carries the memory of such learning. He has analyzed and duplicated it. Either the natural or synthetic version seems to give untrained rats a preference for light.

The long-range implication is astounding. Can memories or knowledge really be synthesized in chemical form for anyone's benefit? Many scientists find this hard to swallow.

For over half a decade, the work has aroused controversy reminiscent of that surrounding telepathy or water dowsing. Critics who dislike the seemingly paragonical claim, deem the claims with a vengeance beyond objective scientific candor. Researchers defend their conclusions just as

Team Man
Robb Bank

As he was being arraigned on a bank robbery charge, Karl (Mushy) Hardendorf, of Dayton, Ohio, told the United States magistrate he robbed the bank because he knew his softball team needed him.

Hardendorf told the officer of the softball team at the federal mental hospital in Springfield, Mo., is nearing 60 and he wanted to go back and take over the spot on the team.

Hardendorf served a term at the facility after he robbed a savings and loan association office in Dayton.

Bradshaw Funeral Saturday

A native and former resident of Mooreville—Floyd C. Bradshaw—died Wednesday of last week at 6:35 in the Veterans Administration Hospital in Olen. Fifty-one years of age, he had been hospitalized since June and had been critically ill a week. He was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Bradshaw.

He was a veteran of World War II.

Survivors include: a son, Wayne Bradshaw of Weaver, N.C.; two daughters, Mrs. Maria Crouse of Winston-Salem and Mrs. Marian Swisher of Santa Ana, Tex.; a brother, Odell Bradshaw of Kannapolis; and a sister, Mrs. Alma McInnis of Port Pierce, Fla. Several cousins reside in Mooreville, including: Mrs. R. L. Bost, Mrs. Horace Gilman, Miss Helen Bradshaw and Charlie, David, Harry and Butch Bradshaw.

Funeral services were conducted Saturday, and burial was in Weaver, north of Asheville.

The Witherspoons Visit Forbidden Caverns In Tenn.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Witherspoon of 914 South Magnolia Street, Mooreville, recently visited the Forbidden Caverns, near the Great Smokey Mountains, to view the many natural formations in the cave.

Pleasant, scenic drive from Gatlinburg and Sevierville, Tenn., was opened in 1967 after two years of excavating and construction work.

The attraction is approved by the National Caves Association and features some of the most spectacular formations in America, all illuminated by an extensive theatrical lighting system.

A coffee shop, large craft shop with an extensive Indian and gun museum have been added and an ancient grist mill with its water wheel has been restored near the cave.

Weddington Aboard Destroyer In Mediterranean

Navy Boatwain's Mate Second Class Gary R. Weddington has departed his Norfolk, Va., home port for extended operations in the Mediterranean on board the USS Claude V. Ricketts, a guided missile destroyer.

Weddington is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin T. Weddington of Mooreville, N.C.

He will participate in Allied and U. S. naval exercises and visit various Mediterranean ports as one of the Navy's "goodwill ambassadors."

Bad News Is A Good Sign

Dr. Lewis Brinton served as a member of the medical staff during the Eastern Jamboree in Pennsylvania that drew 40,000 scouts. He came home more enthused than ever about scouting. He dropped by the office the other day to leave copies of a newspaper the scouts published each day of the week-long gathering, and he used the opportunity to level a criticism at all news media.

"Everything is distorted in news," he said, "in that state park were enough scouts to fill a good-sized city, and they were conducting a meaningful experiment in responsible living. But what made the headlines that whole week? The search for those poor kids in Texas who had been killed and buried all over the place."

We kidded about having to sell papers, and I promised Lewis I wouldn't attempt to take out anybody's appendix if he would stay out of the newspaper business. But I tried to make a serious point. The patient who does not recover from surgery makes news, not the hundreds of patients who do. The nature of news is the exception, not the rule.

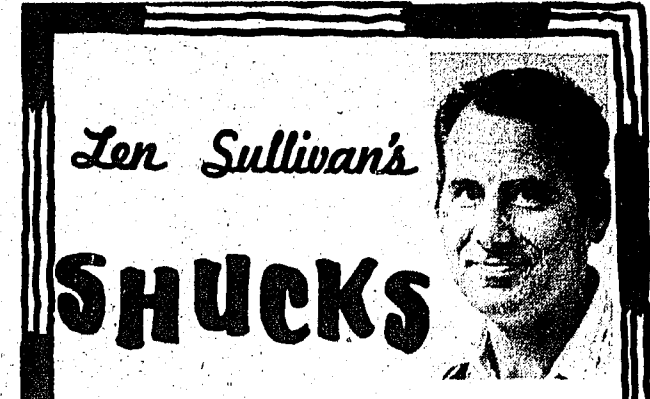

Somebody from time to time starts a good-news-only paper. It never survives. It fails because it is contrary to what news is about. In an important sense, the amount of depressing news—the killings, the corruption, the accidents—we see is a healthy sign. Heaven help us if "legalized burglary" and all the other ramifications of the Watergate mess become the rule rather than the news-making exception.

Lessons From The Papers

Headline in The Charlotte Observer: "Pregnant Woman Get Warning." Add that to your collection of parables that begins with closing the barn door after the horse gets out.

And this from the newspapers: In a pilot program in an Illinois elementary school only 15 per cent of total classroom instruction is based on standard textbooks. The rest comes from newspapers. This way, the thinking is, kids get a current education, and they love it. More, the principal says, the kids are doing better than other schools on district-wide achievement tests.

All of which says something about district-wide achievement tests.

We have friends who live on Lake Norman and whose children attend South High. A daughter loves to roller skate, but she doesn't know any Mooreville children in her age group. Her dad is called upon now and then to drive to East Monro for his friends, back to the Port City rink and back to East Monro after the skating party.

Other lake dwellers have discovered drug use among their children, and they learned their youngsters were moving in the dropout crowd in Mooreville. The kids look to Mooreville for their socializing, but they don't know kids in school here.

This is not to suggest rural South Iredell youngsters fall into this or that problem because they don't attend school in Mooreville. It is to emphasize social shortcomings for children who live in one community and go to school in another.

Keeping The Worms Away

Joe Crowell was the first neighbor I saw out in the yard wrapping foot-wide strips of aluminum foil shoulder-high around hardwood, fruit and nut trees. Joe fixed just one tree, I believe. Saturday morning I drove past the Graham Westmorelands and there was Graham applying the shiny strips to all his trees. Sunday I began to see them all over.

How in the world come? That's just one of the joys of this kind of work; you can ask stupid questions and people only think you're stupid, not nosy.

How come Graham did this to his trees, I asked Sis, his wife. "I asked him the same question. He said somebody told him tin foil would keep caterpillars off the trees." Somebody who? "Lord, I don't know."

Well, how come the tin foil rings, I asked Harry Myers, assistant county agent and tree expert in residence.

"I guess they're decorating for Christmas. I see a lot of people doing it."

"Useless," Harry laughed, "unless, of course, you don't have any caterpillars in your yard. The strips serve the same purpose as blowing a mouth harp on a Mooreville street corner, to keep the lions away. You probably won't be bothered by lions. Might make people feel better about their trees, though. I've seen people hang pie pans in their cherry trees to keep the birds away, and I've seen the birds light on the pie pans to eat cherries."

Harry explained the only effective way to combat the birds is to cover cherry trees with a net, and the proper way to ward off the caterpillars is to spray them. And no point in that this late. Trees already have all the nourishment through their leaves they'll get this season, so why add to the chemical pollution?

But aren't people beautiful? All over town, those attractive aluminum strips tell us a tree lover lives here. They do that, if nothing else.
