Mount Mourne Camp Fire Girls

Mrs. Isabelle Gudger Sigmon of Sherrill's Ford shares this memento of her days as a Camp Fire Girl in her native Mount Mourne. Members of the youth organization with their leader, Mrs. Lydia Parker, around 1931 are, in front, Plato Kelly, Shirley Parker, Elizabeth Watts, Isabelle Gudger and Hazeline Atwell. Back row, from left: Isabelle Morrison, Elizabeth Holthouser, Ruth Cashion, Elizabeth Gilleland, Laura Morrison, Helen Atwell, Stella Parker and Rebecca Woodfin.

BITS 'n PIECES

LITTLE JESSICA McCLURE

Down the hole, the brave men went
To rescue Jessica McClure;
For hour upon hour she'd been entrapped,
At no point was her rescue sure.

Was she alive? Was she conscious?
Was she awake, or sleeping?
All the while brave men dug
While mothers across America were weeping.

Taking turns, the men, in brave pursuit,
Sometimes worked upon their knees;
Into narrow hole, the child had slipped,
Trapped into an eight-inch squeeze.

How welcome would be an infant sound,
If only a faint or feeble cry!
But inch by tortuous inch, the men dug,
Nothing beats failure but a determined try.

Then the whole world breathed a sigh of relief.
At last the brave men got through!
And someone crept out of the awful hole
Clutching securely the child, not yet two.

So America settled down, at last relieved
That the ordeal was over for little Jessica McClure;
Giving thanks to the heroes, neighbors, theirs and ours,
Whose hearts and hands keep America secure.

AMEX Getting Neighbors On Rolling Hills Road

AMEX Packaging, at right, faces Rolling Hills Road in Lakeside Industrial Park in the southwest quadrant of the Interstate 77-N.C. 150 intersection two miles west of town. For the past three years, AMEX has had the 150-acre park to itself. Now it's getting neighbors. The 15,600-square-foot building in foreground will house Ameritech Die and Mold. Behind it is the steel skeletal beginnings of a 15,000-square-foot plant for Lakeside Plastics.

According to U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics estimates, the job classification with the most openings likely between now and 1900 is that of computer service technician.

EVERYBODY'S SCIENCE

A Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture

It is possible to improve on all-time favorites like blueberry cobbler and blueberry pie?

Scientists at the U.S. Department of Agriculture think they've discovered a way: improve the fruit that goes into these classic American desserts. Not only will blueberries be better we'll be having them earlier in the year.

That's because new highbush varieties are now available at nurseries. These newly developed bushes will produce blueberries in a few years that will ripen earlier and taste sweeter.

"These new bluberries are a far cry form the smaller native wild berries that the Indians ate fresh from the plant or Union soldiers forked from cans during the Civil War," said Dr. Arlen D. Draper, who specializes in breeding blueberries for USDA's Agricultural Research Service. "Not only will the berries be larger, they'll stay fresher and be more resistant to disease than their wild cousins of a century ago."

Of the five new highbush berries, two are well-suited to the colder northern climate: Toro, which grows best in Michigan, New Jersey and North Carolina, and Duke, which is well-suited to Michigan, the mid-Atlantic states and the Pacific Northwest. Copper, Gulfcoast and Georgiagem are a new cash crop for the South, where early-bearing highbush blueberries can command premium early-season prices.

Scientists have also been studying a disease that can cut into blueberry yields. Mummy-berry disease is a freeloading fungus that robs fruit of sugar, leaving berries tasteless, woody and dried out. This clever fungus would not be able to get around were it not for a bit of trickery. It alerts the appearance, smell and taste of blueberry leaves to mimic flower blossoms.

Result? An unwarry bee mistakes infected leaves for flowers, where she expects to find a supply of sweet nectar. Landing on the leaf, she only gets fungus spores all over her tongue and legs. Flying off to the next plant, the hapless bee serves as a living taxicab for the fungus.

Fortunately for blueberry growers, scientists have found the disease can often be controlled with urea, although persistent infections may require a fungicide.

Dear friends,

It is very important that the vital statistics concerning a decedent that are entered on the death certificate be as accurate as possible. This recorded document is of considerable legal significance as regards to life insurance claims, Social Security and V.A. benefits, and matters of estate settlement.

Respectfully,

Carol B. Neill
