Mooreville Civitans Win Several Awards During District Convention

The Mooreville Civitan Club was one of the stars of the show at the annual North Carolina District West Civitan convention held Aug. 21 and 22 in Asheville.

Several Mooreville Civitans attended the convention and brought home special awards presented to the local club.

Mooreville Civitans attending the convention were Eddie Nelson, club president; Nina McKnight, club secretary; Aubrey Price, Pat Ingram, Norman Wilson, Jim Ballard and Robert Holshouser Jr. Dr. Sam Houston and family, including AFS exchange student Christina Thelin, attended as guests of the club.

Houston, superintendent of the Mooreville Graded School District, also turned out to be a big winner. He was selected by Civitans in North Carolina's western district as the "District Citizen of the Year."

In nominating Houston for the district honor, the Mooreville Civitan Club noted Houston's aggressive leadership in the Mooreville schools and his community involvement. The presentation of the award is based primarily on the person's activities in areas other than their chosen profession.

Houston's efforts with the Cancer Society, Leukemia Society and his church, as well as his work as vice president and then president of the Mooreville-South Iredell Chamber of Commerce were among the contributions included with Houston's nomination.

In addition to nominating a district winner, the club itself won several top honors. The Mooreville club received the district award for the most outstanding service project as a result of its efforts in spearheading the Mooreville "Cool-It" campaign.

The campaign, which realized another big step this week with the delivery of the air conditioning unit, was a community-wide effort to raise money to purchase an air conditioning system for Roland R. Morgan Auditorium.

Civitan Aubrey L. Price Jr. was the chairman of the project, which raised more than $30,000 through a variety of fundraising projects and events coordinated by the Civitans in conjunction with other Mooreville clubs and organizations.

The Mooreville club was also presented with the "Gold Medal" award for its outstanding contribution to the Summer Special Olympics program. The "Gold Medal" award was given to Civitan clubs that contributed in excess of $50 per member. Only five or six clubs out of the 70 in the western district earned the "Gold Medal."

Three individuals from the Mooreville club were also singled out for their contributions and service during the year.

Nelson was selected as the most outstanding club president for the year in the western district for clubs with between 35 and 60 members. Nelson's leadership and the club's many projects and activities during the year were cited as reasons for Nelson's selection.

McKnight was honored as the outstanding club secretary for clubs in the 35-60 member range. McKnight's reporting of club activities and the fact that her reports were on time, informative and complete were big factors in her selection. McKnight's duties above and beyond the call of duty in the "Cool-It" campaign were also cited.

The last individual honor for a local Civitan went to Wilson, who was elected as a director of the executive board of the western district. Wilson has served the district club as a director, president and as a member of several committees. He will be one of seven directors on the board.

The club earned other recognition in a variety of service and project activities and club officers expressed thanks to the Mooreville community for helping make the club's projects successful during the year.

Counsel On Aging

By Anna Rice, Outreach Director
Phone 663-5112 or 873-5171

In recent years, the "right to die" has received national attention. The issue arises more often for those who are so ill that they either cannot make choices or cannot communicate them.

The phrase may have either of two meanings as applied to a person who is terminally ill: death passively allowed by stopping treatment, or death actively induced in a painless manner. For either meaning, the moral implications have many facets, and the legal questions are largely unanswered.

North Carolina has adopted legislation that provides a procedure for the exercise of a person's right to a natural death. Under this law, the physician relies on a dated, signed, witnessed, and proved declaration that expresses the desire that no extraordinary means be used to prolong life. (Copies of the "Living Will" are available through the local Council on Aging office. Call 663-5112.)

However, there is widespread thought that the Living Will is designed to prevent or terminate unwanted medical treatment. But the Living Will is not an inflexible document. It is intended as an instrument to express the wishes of the individual, simple or complex, specific, and above all, personal.

A person could, for example, use the Living Will as an advance directive for treatment that he definitely did not want, or for treatment that might be wanted, if certain conditions applied.

The point is, each person who has a strong feeling about the right to die with dignity should have a frank discussion with his physician about the kinds of treatment available today. The individual would want to know exactly what the physical and emotional consequences of life-prolonging treatment are likely to be.

Would you never want to be sustained on a respirator, or is there a situation in which you would want treatment? What about artificial feeding and hydration? Antibiotics that sustain life? What about pain killers, in the event of a terminal illness?

And, after learning about the many options or range of treatment choices, sit down and write out specifically what caregivers need to know about your treatment wishes? Be as long-winded as you need to be. Your instructions will in all likelihood be the only source of directing Sept. 10 to hear about the plan's upcoming emergency exercise.

Explanation Of McGuire At Explorium

McGuire Nuclear Station has invited the public to attend a meeting Sept. 10 to hear about the plant's upcoming emergency exercise.

Two sessions, at 6:30 p.m. and 7:30 p.m., will be held at the Energy Explorium. No reservations are necessary.

Persons who attend will learn how McGuire operates, what radiation is and how Duke Power, state and county officials work together on emergency planning for the public. These plans will be tested Sept. 11-12.

At the Sept. 10 meeting, a nuclear power plant operator will provide demonstrations at the control room simulator where the McGuire operators are trained.

The Energy Explorium is on NC 73 near McGuire Nuclear Station and Cowan's Ford Dam.

Police Investigate Stabbing

William Craig Turman, 19, of 234 Southside Ave., Mooreville, sustained a stab wound to his left shoulder early Saturday morning during an altercation that occurred in the 600 block of South Main Street. This report of the 1:39 a.m. incident was released by Mooreville Police Captain Frank Owens.

Turman was visiting his nephew, Jamie Sloop of 616 South Main St., when Mark Cherry, also a resident of 616 South Main St., came out of his upstairs apartment and punctured a tire of Turman's car.

Turman drove the car to his home and returned to the 616 South Main St. apartment complex, carrying a baseball bat.

He and Cherry got into an altercation during which time Cherry allegedly stabbed Turman with a knife.

Turman was taken to the Lake Norman Regional Medical Center by family members where he was treated and released.

Early this week, Turman had not decided whether to prefer charges against Cherry, Captain Owens stated.

Vincent van Gogh, who shot himself at the age of 37, was a painter whose madness was recognized after his tragic suicide. It is doubtful whether he sold more than one or two paintings in his lifetime.

Schools Need Bus Drivers

Iredell County operates 151 buses that serve the Mooreville and county school systems. Unless older operators can be recruited and trained, 40 of these buses will be without drivers Jan. 1.

The U.S. Labor Department has decreed that, effective the first of the year, public school bus drivers must be at least 18 years old.

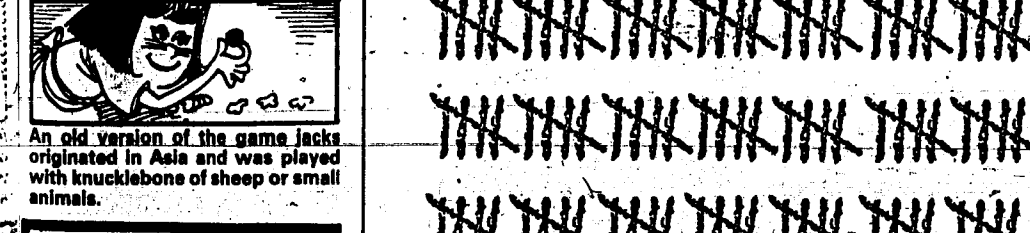

Franklin Ivey is an associate superintendent of the county school system, and he is responsible for buses used by the two systems. He said this week that persons in this area interested in becoming bus drivers should contact Al Jones at Mooreville Senior High, Milton Morrison at South Iredell High or the principal of any county school.

Drivers must be trained, tested and licensed specifically to operate school buses. The next training session will be held Sept. 14-15 at South Iredell High. Ivey said persons who wish to take the training should register in advance.

Love Mom

An old version of the game Jacks originated in Asia and was played with knucklebones of sheep or small animals.

Motor vehicles as art. That was one car buff's summation of the South Iredell Lions Club's sixth annual Antique, Classic and Collector Truck-Car Show and Swap Meet Saturday at the clubhouse on Brawley School Road at Williamson Road. The description was far off the mark.

Again this year, Douglas Payeur and Tommy Stuts co-chaired the show for the club. Payeur said early this week the event drew 112 entries.

"The show had a good deal of variety," he said, "the weather was in our favor, so attendance held up nicely. We aren't through counting income and outgo, but it's safe to say the show was a success."

In addition to an assortment of superbly maintained, restored, customized, personalized, and otherwise sensationalized cars and small trucks, the show featured NASCAR driver Darrell Waltrip's show truck racer on display. The field included a fully-functional 1943 tank destroyer and a 1927 Bugatti Grand Prix racer.

Lions offered food and drink at the clubhouse, so concessions will figure into their revenue. People with similar passions gravitated to each other, the hot rodders here, the classics there, the military equipment guys yonder. They looked and talked.

As an appreciated bonus, the Stony Creek Boys from Statesville—banjoist John Craver, fiddler Leonard Bollick and J.D. Lambert on guitar—helped out with some sweet country songs. Before they went on stage they were joined in a shadere warmup by Larry Workman of Mooreville, who doesn't go much of anywhere without his mandolin. He took a break from the cars to join the band during their shadere warmup.

It was that kind of a laid back, kids-and-dogs, hands-holding couples, family-oriented day, and everybody was comfortable in the knowledge they were helping a hard-working civic club help its community.
