Roots Of Words

Pagan: The word derives from a Roman word, paganus, which meant peasant. Eventually, it became a form of contempt among Roman soldiers who considered the farmers as "slackers" for not joining the army. (The fact that the peasants had to grow the food to feed the army was overlooked.) Eventually, the word, pagan, was used to describe anyone who wasn't a soldier of Christ.

Cole Slaw: The two words actually come from a Dutch term, koolsa, which is made up of the Dutch word for cabbage, kool, and the Dutch word for salad, sla.
