better lighting on Main Street, physical improvements in downtown buildings and better coordinated and publicized promotional activities.

Parking, according to many of the directors, may be the number one priority. Director Ray Boone reported that the majority of the current parking spaces in the downtown area are used by business employees, leaving a limited number of parking spaces for commuters. Boone was using figures compiled during a downtown survey by Ed Stubbs.

Also during last week's meeting, several of the directors pointed out that since the downtown project would involve more than just physical improvements, the commission should look for a full-time director with specific qualifications.

"We need someone who knows about sales and marketing as well as downtown improvement," Director Larry Feinster said at the meeting.

Mott added that the director should also "be able to sell an idea and work well in the business environment."

Mott reported that four applicants were being considered for the position and that he planned to contact Main Street officials at the state level for information about additional candidates for the job.

But he added that board needed to complete the hiring process as soon as possible.

"I'm hoping we can get this thing started before long," Mott said, "and the sooner we get the director on board the better."

The funding for Mooreville's downtown program has been supplied by the town, county and individual merchants. The town gave the program $20,000 and the county added a $5,000 contribution. Other funds in the program's budget, which last week topped $36,000, have come from a contribution basis from local merchants.

Cadet Greene Attends Camp At Ft. Bragg

Cadet Mark H. Greene, son of Floyd E. Greene and Elizabeth N. Greene, both of Mooreville, recently received training in military leadership at the U.S. Army ROTC advanced camp at Fort Bragg.

The six-week camp, attended by cadets normally between their third and fourth year of college, includes instruction in communications, management and survival training.

"A successful completion of the advanced camp and graduation from college results in a commission as a second lieutenant in either the U.S. Army, Army Reserve or National Guard," Greene said.

Greene is a student at Western Carolina University at Cullowhee.

$40.3 Million In Duke Endowments

The Duke Endowment, one of the nation's largest philanthropic trusts, made grants totaling $40.3 million in 1986. According to the 1986 annual report, issued in Charlotte on July 15, the market value of the Endowment's assets rose from $654 million in 1985 to nearly $800 million as of Dec. 31, 1986.

Mary D. B. Semans, chairman of the Endowment's board of trustees, said, "Foundations may never be able to produce clear balance-sheet results of grants in the way corporations can for profits and losses. But in stepping forth to take some calculated risks, in providing that cable used in the system will cost $89,000.

To help pay for the extended area service, telephone subscription rates will increase. Once the EAS is in service, residential telephone rates will increase 41 cents per month and the business rate will increase $1.02 per month.

It is also likely that Alltel will ask for an additional rate increase because, with EAS, Mooreville would enter a larger "call-up scope." The per month rate increases that could be requested have been estimated at $3.80 for individual residents and $9.50 for businesses.

The update to the Mooreville phone system, scheduled to be completed Aug. 6 of next year, involves transferring numbers with 663 prefixes to a more modern computer system.

Neill said the changeover, which was completed on 663 prefix numbers in 1984, would bring the entire Mooreville system up to the same modernized level.

The computer switchover of the 663 prefix numbers represents a $2.3 million expenditure for Alltel, according to Neill.

Private builders will be asked to bid on the home renovations. The town will curb and gutter, and prepare streets. A decision has not been made on whether the town will pave the streets or contract this phase of the project.

venture capital so seldom available from any other sources, foundations are fulfilling an important role in our nation."

Semans, whose great-uncle James B. Duke established the Endowment in 1924, is the first woman to head the Charlotte-based foundation.

Contributions by the Endowment are designated for not-for-profit hospitals and child-care institutions in the two Carolinas, to the rural United Methodist Church in North Carolina, and to four educational institutions: Davidson College, Duke, Furman, and Johnson C. Smith universities.

The report also describes the Endowment-funded projects such as the Benjamin N. Duke Leadership Program at Duke University, the new initiative on maternal and child health in the Carolinas; the growth in development offices in child-care institutions; and community services provided by rural churches.

The report also outlines assistance provided by Endowment staff members to grantees as well as to some organizations which do not qualify for funding. For example, the Endowment sponsors a library of reference materials for grant-seekers. It has conducted two grantmanship workshops to acquaint nonprofit organizations with the library's resources and to give them training in seeking corporate and foundation support.

The report shows that 90 percent of 1986 income was allocated to various beneficiaries. Of the $40.3 million total, educational institutions received $3 percent ($21 million); health care, 37 percent ($15 million); child-care institutions received $5 percent ($1.8 million); and the rural churches received $5 percent ($2 million).

Since its inception in 1924, the Endowment has made grants totaling over $787 million to the beneficiaries named by James B. Duke.

The chamber now has vice presidents for merchants, economic development, economic development and public affairs. Its fifth would concentrate on existing industries.

Robert Holshouser Jr., public affairs vice president, said a Sept. 17 chamber-led community observance of the 200th birthday of the U.S. Constitution. He said various activities are being planned, including union ringing of church bells, flying flags and an evening program in the Senior High auditorium.

State Unemployment Rate Steady At 4.5 Percent In July

North Carolina's unemployment rate stayed steady at 4.5 percent for July.

Last month's figures, released today by the U.S. Department of Labor, showed that the unemployment rate had not changed since June.

North Carolina's unemployment rate is the fourth lowest among the 11 largest states. Only New York with 4.4 percent, New Jersey with 4.0 percent and Massachusetts with 3.5 percent had lower state unemployment rates. Texas and Michigan, at 8.8 percent, had the highest unemployment rate in July.

The national unemployment rate (seasonally adjusted) dropped 0.1 percent to 6.0 percent in July.

The U.S. Department of Labor figures for July show North Carolina's labor force at 3,322,000 with 3,171,000 employed and 151,000 unemployed. In June, these figures were 3,292,000, 3,143,000 and 149,000, respectively.

Holshouser To Direct New Program

Mooreville's infant Extended School Year Program, already packed with a healthy number of students, now has a head teacher, and the road is paved for classes to start.

Monday night, in its final regular monthly meeting before school bells start ringing early next week, the Mooreville Board of Education approved the appointment of Carolyn Holshouser to serve as lead instructor during the official year of the system's Extended Day Program.

Holshouser has been a teacher at Mooreville Junior High since 1979, and board members unanimously approved her reassignment during Monday's meeting.

Holshouser fills one of two teaching positions available within the promising program, which is being provided primarily through a $500 grant supplied by the Job Training and Partnership Act.

According to Dr. Jane Carrigan, director of instruction and special projects, the remaining teaching students may be divided among as many as five current instructors.

Dr. Sam Houston, school superintendent, stated that those current full-time teachers may be able to share the duties of that remaining slot in the program by taking turns teaching sections of the Extended Day Program.

According to Houston, the innovative program will offer eligible area youths with the opportunity to receive advanced instruction otherwise unavailable to them in the system.

Last year, qualifying students were sought for the program during its recruiting stage, a preliminary phase conducted to reveal if there was enough interest and participation to make the program worthwhile.

According to Carrigan, who supervised the student search, 17 students, more than enough to merit the program's value, are registered for classes that will start this year, and three others are currently in the signing up process.

Houston revealed that an increase in the number of students enrolled in the program could result in additional state-provided benefits through the JTPA.

The selection of Holshouser as the project's head teacher highlighted Monday night's personnel-filled meeting, during which board members approved the hiring of 10 new teachers, two new aides, and a new school food service director.

In addition, Houston informed members that the system will continue to operate on its approved interim budget of $2,016,445 until the exact amount of state funding has been confirmed.

Letters TO THE EDITOR

To the editor:

I would like to respond to the letter in the paper last week which mentioned the traffic problem on Main Street. I assume it was referring to our teenagers "cruising," as they call it.

I realize this could be a problem at times, but what else is there for them to do?

The town of Mooreville offers no recreation for our young people. When I was a teenager we had the "Club" (War Memorial) where we could dance or listen to music. We also had the State Theater.

Our kids have to go to another town to see a movie. Most parking lots have banned parking after hours so they can't park their cars and just talk to each other.

If people in this town don't want our teenagers to "cruise town" or park their cars than give them a place to go.

Lattimer Returns From Deployment

Marine First Lieutenant Richard M. Lattimer, son of Richard M. Lattimer of 100 Point of View Dr., Mooreville, recently returned from a six-month Mediterranean deployment with the 26th Marine Amphibious Unit, Camp Lejeune, as part of Landing Force Sixth Fleet 2-87.

During the deployment, Lattimer participated in five combined amphibious exercises and one unilateral joint amphibious exercise. And, for the first time in 15 years, Marines conducted an exercise on the island of Corsica. This exercise allowed LFGF to practice and refine the special operations techniques developed during their pre-deployment training period.

A 1979 graduate of Barnstable High School, Hyannis, Maine, and a 1983 graduate of Ohio State University in Columbus, Ohio, with a bachelor of arts degree, Lattimer joined the Marine Corps in August 1983.

Today these old men are at peace with themselves. They and veterans of all our military conflicts rightfully can take pride in their contributions.

Not so the late, unlamented Rudolf Hess. Until death gave him final relief—or introduced worse punishment—Monday, he was the last surviving symbol of unshakeable evil. Hess was two years older and worlds removed from John Newton.

Hess tried three times to kill himself in prison. The Third Reich he thought would last a thousand years disintegrated in 12. The Constitution defended by all of America's John Newtons over the past two centuries is going strong. Who among us doesn't join Roger Hyatt in wishing for this marvelous instrument many happy returns to the day?
