

TIME WITH CAROLINA BACK TO SCHOOL TIME...

1987-1988 School Bus Routes

The Mooresville School System will operate a 12 bus fleet during the upcoming academic year, delivering students to and from five schools. Children should board buses scheduled to run on first Friday morning. Routes were prepared by Al Jones, and inquiries concerning school transportation should be directed to him. He may be contacted at Senior High between 8 a.m. and 3 p.m. Monday through Friday. Jones said parents of children who will ride bus No. 260 will be contacted individually by letter within the next few days.

Volunteer Corps Is A Valuable Support Group For Public Schools

A desire to help and a genuine concern for children and schools are the qualifications of some 165,000 people in North Carolina who volunteer each year to assist teachers in helping students.

While state and local officials are pleased with the contributions made by community volunteers, much more could be done for students if more citizens could get involved.

A school volunteer can give a child the extra time he or she may need to feel special and can give teachers much-needed relief from extra duties that take time away from children," according to Jessie Rae Scott, consultant with the Division of School-Community Relations.

"As I travel the state visiting local school systems," Scott explained, "I see people of all ages and all abilities offering a helping hand in schools, but I also see needs that could be met if more of our citizens would get involved."

It is simple to become a school volunteer. Letting a principal, teacher or volunteer coordinator know of the interest, attending an orientation meeting, receiving an assignment and then showing up to help are all that is needed to get involved.

Volunteer services are needed in schools to provide added help for teachers, to supplement and enrich the educational programs by sharing special talents or skills, to offer individual help to students who need one-on-one attention and to relieve teachers and other staff of non-teaching duties such as preparing bulletin boards.

In many school systems, volunteers are given special training in tutoring and classroom assistance. Also, orientation sessions are held to help volunteers become familiar with school structure.

Reading or telling stories, supervising small groups, sharing special talents, making instructional games, tutoring and assisting with art or music are just a few examples of how volunteers assist in schools.

Volunteers also work in the library, helping children select books, checking books in or out or showing filmstrips or movies. The school office also needs volunteers to help answer the telephone, assist with filing and typing or selling school supplies. School volunteers also assist in health clinics, cafeteria, playgrounds and with student clubs and field trips.

Scott says school volunteers increasingly are people who work but spend their lunch hours or evenings and weekends helping out in schools. Volunteers who can help out after school hours may build something the school needs, such as playground equipment; contribute to special fund raising drives; purchase tickets for students to a special event; serve on an advisory group; share management expertise; arrange for guest speakers; transcribe books into Braille or serve on the school board.

During 1985-86, some 145,000 volunteers spent over two million hours helping schools in North Carolina. These volunteers were some of the over 80 million Americans, nearly one-half the population, who volunteered that year. The monetary value of volunteer time during that period was $10 billion dollars.

In North Carolina, a 1981 survey indicated that 71 percent or over four million adults volunteered. According to the 1985 Americans Volunteer survey, the primary reasons given for becoming volunteers were the satisfaction of helping others, interest in the work or activity or because the work was enjoyable.

For more information on volunteering in a North Carolina school, contact a school principal or volunteer coordinator.

Lions' Aug. 29 Show Stars Classy Chassis

Some of the classic, cleanest and coolest cars in the Carolinas are expected to be on display during the sixth annual Antique, Classic and Collector Truck-Car Show and Swap Meet Aug. 29 near Mooresville.

The event, sponsored again this year by the South Iredell Lions Club, will be held at the club but on Brawley School Road. The annual car extravaganza is ideal for people who love to tour, trade or talk cars and trucks.

This year's event will be an all-day affair with judging beginning at 1 p.m. Throughout the day, refreshments and entertainment will be available.

An additional attraction for this
