Oren Holt, center, was installed Monday night as president of the Mooreville Kiwanis Club during its weekly supper meeting at Western Steer Family Steakhouse. Wendell Cramer of Newton, Kiwanis district lieutenant governor, was a guest of the club, and he conducted an installation ceremony for officers. Others who make up the club's Holt administration are, from left, Bill Lineberger, immediate past president; Jay White, secretary; Roger Hyatt, vice president; and Bob Davidson, treasurer. Directors are Vic Anhorn, Charlie Bruce, John Lewis, Thurston McNeely, Frank Poore and Holmes Poston and Jim Suitt.

Inactive Hazardous Waste Sites Must Be Identified

The 1987 General Assembly passed legislation which will go a long way toward protecting the state's drinking water — particularly that of many of the state's rural residents.

Considered by some to be the session's most important piece of environmental legislation, the bill authorizes the state Department of Human Resources to identify, list and monitor any and all inactive hazardous substance or hazardous waste disposal sites within North Carolina.

The legislation further orders the persons responsible for such sites to conduct appropriate tests to determine any hazards posed to the state and to develop and implement a remedial action plan to clean the sites up. No one who voluntarily cleans up his inactive site will be required to spend more than $3 million.

In addition, the General Assembly appropriated $436,000 over the next two years to the Solid and Hazardous Waste Management Branch of DHHR to begin implementation of this legislation. The Legislature appropriated an additional $600,000 to fund the Carolina Clean Drinking Water Fund, which will be used for the development of remedial action plans and for the clean up of hazardous sites.

North Carolina currently has no active plan for locating, monitoring and cleaning up inactive hazardous sites. A hazardous site is any site where toxic, corrosive, flammable or otherwise hazardous materials are stored or disposed of. Experts estimate approximately 700 sites within the state.

The ratified legislation was sponsored by Rep. Joe Hackney and included parts of bills drafted by Sen. Tom Telford and Sen. Paul Smith.

Faulk Examines 'Plan B' Aftermath

Monkey Wrench Opens Doors For Potential New Industry

Industry representatives, who toured Mooreville last Monday may not select this area for a new plant, but the officials have to be impressed with Mooreville-South Iredell's dedication — especially that of Homer Faulk.

Faulk, executive vice president of the Mooreville-South Iredell Chamber of Commerce, is the man responsible for showing prospective industries around the Mooreville community and doing whatever he can to get them interested in locating in Mooreville. The "whatever he can" part came into play last Monday.

This story of dedication, determination and making the best of a bad situation started last Sunday, Faulk, preparing for a visit from industry representatives, delivered his four-wheel-drive Jeep to the South Iredell Industrial Park.

The prospective clients were to arrive by helicopter Monday and they planned to take a look at some hard-to-get-to sites on the back portion of the industrial park. Faulk had the helicopter early and flew over the site with the industry representatives.

When the officials were ready to get a closer look, the helicopter pilot set the craft down by the waiting Jeep, which Faulk had filled with all sorts of pertinent information about the potential building site and the Mooreville-South Iredell community.

Faulk and the three visitors, anxious to see the site, walked over to the Jeep and Faulk started to unlock the doors. That's when he realized he had the ignition key, but no door keys.

Inside the locked doors, Faulk saw the stack of information he had carefully prepared for the visitors. Outside, he saw three surprised visitors in business suits waiting to see his next move.

Faulk, being a veteran industrial recruiter trained not to panic in unusual situations — calmly went back to the helicopter. After a brief conversation with the pilot, he returned to the Jeep armed with monkey wrench.

After a quick walk around the Jeep to determine the most vulnerable yet least vital point, Faulk slammed the monkey wrench through the vent window on the passenger side.

"I might have forgotten the key," Faulk said later when recounting the story, "but at least I thought enough to break a small window."

When the smoke — or glass — had cleared and access to the Jeep obtained, Faulk and the industry representatives got in their assigned site-seeing and the rest of the visit was completed without incident, but Faulk thinks the memory of the unusual circumstances stuck with the officials.

"The prospects got a kick out of it and I think, in a way, it made a good impression on them," Faulk said with a smile. "It wasn't the slickest of visits, but I thought we made the transition to Plan B very smoothly."

Alcohol - Drug Information

By BILL WEANT

Tri-County Mental Health Center

The most unpredictable drug on the street today is PCP, or phenylcyclopropylmethylamine.

This is a man-made drug that cannot be placed in any standard drug category. Although generally described as an anesthetic, it is chemically unrelated to hallucinogens such as LSD and mescaline.

PCP is most noted for the variety of its effects, as it stimulates, depresses or hallucinogenic—and for its unpredictability. Users describe effects ranging from high to depression.

Manufactured as a white or yellowish-white crystal-like powder, PCP is often seen on streets in a variety of forms. It may be taken as a tablet capsule. Referred to as "angel dust," it is often sprinkled on tobacco or marijuana and smoked. It is snorted or injected less often than taken orally.

Moderate doses of PCP produce physical and mental loss of control. Lower amounts produce a rush and act as an anesthetic.

Slang names for PCP include: angel dust, animal tranquilizer, depressant or hallucinogenic—and for its unpredictability. Users describe effects ranging from high to depression.

PCP was first developed in 1957 as a general pain killer. It was abandoned in 1965 and commercially available only as an animal tranquilizer. Legal manufacture of PCP was banned in 1976.

Due to its unpredictability, PCP is more dangerous than other drugs. People receiving PCP who were not aware of it have experienced periods of uncontrollable agitation. This has also happened with people who knew they were taking PCP. The user can never be sure exactly what will happen once the drug is taken.

There is disagreement as to whether PCP is physically addictive. Some sources indicate the tolerance develops over a period of time. There is a need to progressively increase the amount of the drug used to get the same effect.

Unemployment Decreases In September

In September, unemployment rates showed a moderate decrease in all of the state's 100 counties and in all of the nine metropolitan statistical areas. The rate in Iredell County was 3 percent, down from 3.3 percent in August.

Employment. Security Commission of North Carolina figures today show that only one county experienced September unemployment rates over 10 percent. It was Graham with 11.8 percent, down from 13.5 percent in August.

The state's seasonally unadjusted rate of unemployment, decreased moderately to 5.5 percent from 6.2 percent. The September figures also show the state's labor force at 3,303,100 with 3,188,700 employed and 118,400 unemployed. In August, those figures were 3,383,300, 3,211,400 and 178,900 respectively.

Mount Pleasant Methodist Church Revival

Revival services are scheduled to be conducted at Mount Pleasant Methodist Church in Durham from next week, Nov. 8-11. Dr. Joe D. Glass, Jr. will be the guest minister.

The first service will be held Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. Services will continue each evening, Sunday through Wednesday, at 7:30 o'clock.

The pastor of Mount Pleasant Methodist Church, the Rev. Grady Barringer, joins members of the church in inviting the public to attend the series of special services.

Dr. Glass, the revival speaker, holds the Martin Luther Stevens Professor of Religion chair at Lenoir-Rhyne College in Hickory and is involved in the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

A native of Kannapolis, Dr. Glass was educated in the Kannapolis schools. He received his bachelor of arts degree from Duke University at Durham with a major in economics. Although he was already employed at a law school, Dr. Glass became convinced that God was calling him to the ministry. He called him to the Lenoir-Rhyne Theological Seminary in Lenoir, N.C., where he was president of the student body and graduated in 1967.

He served as associate pastor at Beth Eden Lutheran Church in Newton for a time and then moved to Yale University for his Ph.D. in religion and psychology.

After obtaining his Ph.D. in 1964, he moved to Lenoir-Rhyne College where he developed a program of Christian Education, training both young men and women going into Christian education work.

Dr. Glass is currently involved in the "Pastor As Teacher" workshops throughout the Lutheran Church, assisting retired ministers in upgrading their educational knowledge and techniques.

He is involved in teaching special courses in the Christian view of death and dying.

He is also active in the rehabilitation work for alcoholics in North Carolina.

Dr. Glass is married to the former Carolyn Wise of Asheville, and the couple has three children—Joey, Sharon, and Mark—and two grandchildren.

Jacksonville, Florida has the largest total area of any city in the U.S. it takes in 460 square miles.
