

Cruiser Is Launched With Special Deputy Van Rees Aboard

Boat Launch Begins New Patrol Era For Iredell Sheriff's Department

The Iredell County Sheriff's Department now patrols the land and the Inland Sea in its bailiwick. A bunch of by land, one by sea. The department has several patrol cars, but it launched its one Lake Norman cruiser Nov. 4.

The yellow, 23-foot, 1976-model inboard-outboard fiberglass Islander and a trailer were donated to the department by Pete Dilday of Statesville. It is valued in excess of $10,000. It is powered by a 351-cubic-inch V-8 engine and equipped with police lights, siren and radio. It is based at Duke's Marina on N.C. 150 near the Iredell-Catawba bridge, where owner Dave Duquemin has donated use of a covered slip. Sheriff Clyde Lloyd drove a pickup towing the boat to the marina's ramp. Special Deputy Pat Van Rees was aboard as the craft was launched around 9:15 a.m. before a small audience that included Sheriff's Deputy Dilday, Deputy Stanley Watkins and Duquemin.

These and other members of the sheriff's department took part in a six-hour shakedown cruise that covered much of the Iredell shoreline. Van Rees, a lake resident, and an experienced power boater, directed orientation. A member of the county's Emergency Medical Service staff, he will devote his special deputy duties to lake patrol. Lloyd said Watkins and deputies Ken Cline and Thomas Thompson, who also are assigned to South Iredell patrol, are training to operate the cruiser. The sheriff said the patrol boat will be used daily and that it is available in the event of emergencies on the lake. He emphasized that his lake patrol will "cooperate in every way" with that of the Lake Norman Marine Commission.

Mecklenburg County has maintained a police presence on Lake Norman several years. Catawba County, considering a lake patrol, but Lincoln, the fourth county with lake shoreline, appears cool to the idea.

ENERGY

By Harriette B. Skaggs

Duke Power Consumer Products Specialist

Every house is a solar collector whether you want it to be or not. However, you can control and use the heat to your advantage when the sun is shining and the sun is not shining. When necessary with the effective use of drapes, shades, blinds, and awnings. In addition, increasing the glass area in a home also increases heat losses and gains. So in choosing window sizes for a home, carefully balance the need for additional light and view with the need to manage energy wisely.

Both the sun's rays beaming on the home and the amount of glass play major roles in the heating and cooling needs of the home. If wide choices are made in the types and amounts of glass at the time the home is built, it can actually result in the need for smaller, less expensive heating and cooling equipment.

Bare windows are bad news. Single glass windows should have storm windows. The air space between the glass reduces heat flow. And even though there may be two panes of glass there to reduce heat loss, a double pane window can still lose 10 times as much heat as a well insulated wall of the same dimensions.

So imagine what can be lost through a single pane. Double glazing (two panes of window separated by a sealed air space) cuts heat loss through the glass by 40-50 percent. In extremely cold regions, triple glazing can be justified to further reduce heat loss. Awnings can also help protect windows from heat loss in winter and gain in summer.

A thermostat for the heating and cooling system—should never be located near a window or door. However, if it is, be sure to keep windows or doors near your thermostat tightly closed. If your thermostat is in a cold draft, the heating system will run even when the heat of the house is sufficiently warm.

In an existing home there are numerous other ways to manage energy around windows. In the winter you can save on your energy bill by opening drapes or shades on the eastern and southern sides of the house and closing them at night. If it is a sunny afternoon, you can obtain additional heat from the western side of the house as well. Shades should be closed at all times of the day during the winter on the north side of the house. Don't forget drapes over sliding glass doors.

Check weatherstripping around windows and doors. Homes can be made reasonably airtight with the proper application of caulking. Caulking helps reduce infiltration loss when heating and cooling. Plastic or vinyl window covers are available for jealousy and poorly fitted windows. Children and other occupants should be encouraged to keep windows and doors closed when operating a heating or cooling system. Inform them of the benefits of good energy management habits. Quickly replace or repair broken windows, worn weatherstripping and caulking around windows. A broken glass pane is the same as a leaky faucet drip water.

In conclusion, windows can be real culprits in the effort to manage energy wisely. But limiting the amount of glass in a home, effectively protecting the windows with storm windows, weatherstripping, caulking, and using window shades, blinds, drapes, and awnings can make a big difference in energy wasted through glass.

many attention-getting assignments. Graham said crews from his company formed the slope tunnels at the new Charlotte Coliseum and have also been involved in the construction of high-rise office buildings in Winston-Salem and Charlotte.

"So far, this has been our best year ever and it looks like things will stay busy for at least the next few months," Graham said. "We've done some work in Virginia and Georgia, but with so much going on around here, our plan is to stick to the two Carolinas."

If business keeps improving, CFA may have to assign some of its crews to very close-to-home projects — an addition to the company's Rinehardt Road headquarters.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To the editor: I speak for thousands like me in addressing these words to the memory of Miss Cora Preece, who died Nov. 4.

What a difference you made in the lives of all of us who were privileged to have you as teacher and friend! You have gained your final degree, your coronation — eternal life. Heaven now is your home, but oh, how you touched our lives.

We learned so much from you, to love our date, our country, our world. You taught us to sing with pride "The Old North State" — Carolina, Carolina. You developed our talents. Each day began with thanks to God, with Bible Study, devotionals and prayer.

Thank you for not accepting less than our best, in our studies and in our relationships. You taught us to respect our minds and use them to develop our minds and abilities. You encouraged us to be good citizens.

Miss Cora, you may not have helped produce a President of this great country, but rather thousands of good citizens. We appreciated your firmness, your fairness and your constant guidance with love. When we came to your class we were a year away from our teen years, a time of change in our lives, our curriculum was becoming more advanced, you were there and you instilled in us the ability to persevere and achieve, making the rest of our years less difficult.

Less than two weeks ago I told you, as I always did, that you had been a great influence in my life, as well as on the lives of thousands of others. I also said "I love you" and you questioned why?

We all know how many young people you helped make it possible to pursue higher education. You never ceased to be interested in seeing us attain a higher level in life.

Even in death you gave yourself, by willing yourself to medical science, to help those who were in need. You were always there for us. May we meet again someday in a place you taught us so much about. Farewell, our teacher, our friend.

Three Persons Receive Injuries In Two-Vehicle Weekend Wrecks

A total of three persons were injured in two unrelated accidents in the south Iredell County area during the weekend, according to the N.C. Highway Patrol.

Two persons sustained injuries in an 11 a.m. wreck Saturday. Jeanette Arndt, 19, of Statesville Avenue, Mooresville, and Fred John Hendren, 82, of Hiddendale, route 2, were treated for minor injuries at Lake Norman Regional Medical Center following a two-vehicle accident east of Mooresville at the intersection of N.C. 150 and N.C. 115.

Following treatment, they were released. According to Trooper Sam Cogdill, Hendren was driving a 1987 Chevrolet on N.C. 115 when he attempted to make a left turn onto N.C. 150. His truck was hit by a 1974 Chevrolet being operated by Debbie Arlene Updell, 18, of Mooresville, route 5.

Arndt was a passenger in the Updell car.

The officer cited Hendren with a safe movement violation.

Robert Douglas Johnson, 18, of Mooresville, route 4, was injured

Friday in a 7:40 a.m. wreck on Perth Road at this point that Johnson's Trooper Cogdill said Johnson pulled out to pass two cars and an Iredell County school bus while driving south when a 1987 Ford driven by Mary K. Sparks, 17, of Mooresville, route 1, tried to make a left turn from directly behind the bus into the parking lot at Skipper's Landing. It was at this point that Johnson's truck hit Sparks' car.

Johnson was brought to the Lake Norman Regional Medical Center in Mooresville, where he was treated and released.

Sparks was cited for making an unsafe traffic movement.

The Repeat Beat Goes On As Vikings Serve Again As Soccer Champions

If this looks familiar, it should. It could have been taken last year. Or even the year before. And probably next year, too. Yes, that's how closely-associated South Iredell High School's varsity soccer team has grown to the Foothills Athletic Soccer Conference championship. This year is no exception to what has been established as a yearly rule. The Vikings, for the second time by themselves and the third time as either lone or co-conference champions, again reign as the league's best bunch of booters, as reflected by their 10-1 FASC mark.

South Iredell also fashioned a once-beaten, 14-1 record overall during the regular season. Members of the team showing off their third straight first-place plaque are, seated from left, Eric Smith, Scott Carwona, Mark Hefner, Doug Simpson,
