Local Center Provides Valuable 'Head Start' For Area Children

Mooresville's Head Start Center is up and running.

The local facility, made possible through the combined efforts of I CARE, Faith United Methodist Church in Mooresville and many caring individuals, is serving 20 pre-schoolers with expectations of doubling that number by next fall.

Head Start provides educational experiences for children who, because of family or financial situations, may otherwise not have the opportunity for any type of pre-school training. In addition, basic medical and psychological care are provided if needed.

The goal of the program is to give underprivileged children the "head start" they need to be on solid footing when they reach school age. Past studies have indicated that without the training and experiences provided by Head Start and other similar programs, many of the "at risk" children fall behind in the early school years and never catch up.

Last year, I CARE approached the Mooresville Town Board about helping it obtain space to operate a local Head Start center. The town and the recreation department volunteered part-time use of the West End Recreational Center, but Head Start regulators said the facility did not meet specifications.

When the ideal appeared stalled, Faith United Methodist Church, at 430 Patterson Avenue, stepped in. The church gave Head Start permission to use part of the church space for the center and, last month, Head Start began operating in Mooresville.

On Monday, local officials, members of the I CARE board of directors and parents were invited to an informal open house at the local center.

Mayor Joe Knox represented the town and thanked Beverly Rankin, Head Start director, for her efforts in making the local center a reality. He also emphasized the value the center will have for the town.

"This is a tremendous asset for our community," Knox said. "This program will give a lot of our children the preparation they need to succeed."

In addition to Knox and Rankin, the open house participants included Goldie Wells, chairperson of the I CARE board of directors; the Rev. Scott Jackson, an I CARE director; and Dr. John Nantz, policy council chairman.

The Mooresville Head Start Center has a three-person staff. Terry Benfield is the teacher and Eva Kernes is the assistant. Barbara Lyons is the center's cook.

The local center is currently accepting applications for the next school year. For more information, call the center at 664-1880.

Dinner Theatre At St. Mark's

A new concept in church-related entertainment will makes its debut Sunday at St. Mark's Lutheran Church.

Combining the traditions of a church covered-dish supper with the popularity of live performances, the St. Mark's Evangelism Committee will sponsor a covered dish dinner theatre.

The event will be held at the church, just off Fieldstone Road, starting at 5:30 p.m. The meal will be served from 5:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. and the performance will begin at 6:30 p.m. and last until 7 p.m.

The play, "Hotel Heaven," will be presented by the Crescent Players of Lyerly Memorial United Church of Christ.

The play is set at heaven's gate, where a receptionists angel greets the recently departed who wish to enter the kingdom. The receptionist checks the names against those entered in the "accepted" ledger. Only one of the current applicants are on that list.

The play's message is that good works, worldly possessions, prestige and pride aren't qualifications for heaven. Only humble acceptance of God's grace gains entrance.

A nursery will be provided during the performance and an offering will be accepted to cover costs associated with the program.

The public is invited to attend.
