—Those attending the commissioning service for the Rev. James W. Fletcher as mission developer of the Brookside Church in Blowing Rock Sunday afternoon were Valerie Baggett, Pat Mullis, Laura MacLaurine, Charles & Peggy Myers, Cathy & Jamie Hunt, Nora Rushton, Ann Wilson, Judy Crawford, Billie Ree Hall, Ronald Perry, Wayne Collins, Trene and Arlisa Thompson, Minnie Perry, Tom Patterson, Karen Kistler, Haley Myers, Richard & Elma Jarvis, Sarah and Lindsay Hunt. The Coddle Creek Choir provided the special music at the service.

—Helen & Webb McLean of the Mooreville ARP Church also attended the service as well as representatives from Lakeside Fellowship ARP Church, Pressly Memorial ARP Church, New Sterling ARP Church, Huntersville ARP Church, and Chalmers Memorial ARP Church. —The Presbytery Commission included the Rev. Michael Lineberger who presided, the Rev. George Syme who preached, the Rev. Ed Linderman who charged the pastor, Elder Tom Patterson who charged the congregation, and Elder Harold Morrison who led in the commissioning prayer. The church was filled with worshippers. Following the service, the Brookside members hosted a reception at the home of Tom & Michele Bouvier.

—The flowers in the sanctuary Sunday were given in memory of Mr. Harold D. Burgess on his birthday by Mr. & Mrs. Dennis Jenkins.

—Boyce Hunt has returned home from Due West, S.C., where he participated in the RISE program at Erskine College.

—Dr. & Mrs. L. M. Allison of Due West, S.C., visited with Eva Craven over the weekend. David & Marilyn Simmons, Stephanie, Michael and Matthew, also of Due West, S.C., stopped by Saturday afternoon for a brief visit. The Simmons are missionaries to Peru and have been home this past year on furlough.

—Mr. and Mrs. Ken Peloe and Aaron of Ohio visited with Ruth and Barney Patterson over the weekend.

—Sarah Karriker sends her love to her many friends and asks for your continued prayers for her recovery.

—Eva Craven expresses appreciation to the congregation for the many kindnesses shown at her surgery and during her recovery.

—Congratulations to Marie Wallace who has retired as a teacher in the public schools. For many years Mrs. Wallace has been on the faculty at Odell Elementary.

—Those desiring to purchase a copy of the new hymnal for personal use can contact the church office.

—Sick Sarah Karriker remains a patient in Mercy Hospital; Louise Long, Inez Kistler, Rufus Brooks, Barney Patterson, Pressly Brawley, and Eva Craven.

—The Lally in Action Conference will be held Friday and Saturday at Bonclark. Dr. Donald E. Hoke, senior pastor of the Cedar Springs Presbyterian Church, Knoxville, TN, is the main speaker. Several from Coddle Creek plan to attend.

—The congregation is called to meet following the service on July 14 to consider the Museum Building Proposal.

—There will be a called meeting of First Presbyterian Monday at 7 p.m. at the Glenwood Church in Charlotte.

—The page proofs for the Pictorial Directory were mailed in Tuesday.

—We were pleased to run into our friend, Douglas Gebbie, in Blowing Rock Sunday. Douglas is a minister of the Free Church of Scotland. Last summer, he preached at both Coddle Creek and Lakeside Fellowship.

—Douglas is in the states for a month of vacation and is staying with the Monahan family in West Jefferson. The Monahans are a part of the Brookside Church.

—The Session voted to give 25 copies of the Bible Songs Hymnal which were no longer in use to the Brookside Church. The books were delivered Sunday. Note: We still use The Bible Songs, but have received a donation of new copies from the Grahams.

Down Easterner Jones A Miracle Worker

By CAROL LANE

In 1988, the first year Dick Jones worked on the Children's Miracle Network Television for Children's Hospital of Eastern North Carolina, he did it as an assignment of his employer, WITN-TV.

Since then, he's been hooked. He became special events chairman between the first and second telethon. He's revealed in that job since.

"People who see Dick on TV during the telethon might think that's all he does," Margaret Sullivan, local telethon coordinator, said. "That's far from the truth. I've had almost daily communication with him all these years. And his contacts within the region and his enthusiasm for our work have had a tremendous impact on how well the telethon turns out each year. June 1, during the sixth annual telethon, Jones went on the air twice. It was only a roll down a long hall to be there. He was hospitalized in the Pitt County Memorial Hospital at the time. And this region's portions of the national telethon aired live from the Brody Medical Science Building adjacent to the hospital.

Those who saw Jones on the telecast may have been dismayed by his appearance. His looks have changed greatly since the 1980 telethon.

Jones has cancer of the liver. Last June, he retired from WITN after 20 years. He was elated that he and his wife, Lillian, were starting a marketing, public relations and promotions business.

But last July, when a bite of chicken seemed to get stuck halfway to his stomach, he went to his doctor. The explanation: cancer of the esophagus.

Jones underwent radiation and chemotherapy treatments. He had hopes he was recovering, but recently he learned the cancer has spread to his liver.

Did he hesitate about going on the air showing people that he had cancer?

"Not one bit," he said. "I knew it was what I wanted to do. I hope it didn't bother other people. It didn't bother me."

Apparently his appearance bolstered this year's telethon's effectiveness. The phone started jangling after his appearances, and the pledges rolled in, many in his honor.

In the three days the telethon was aired, a group from Washington raised more than $7,500 in honor of Jones. WITN gave $5,000 in his honor. More than a quarter million dollars were raised during the telethon.

His special events projects this year were eminently successful. For 20 years, Jones was a TV celebrity in this area.

"Many television people have helped us," Dr. Jon B. Tingelstad, medical director of the Children's Hospital said. "But there's no one quite like Dick. He's eastern North Carolinian all the way and people love him and respond to him like no one else."

Jones is eastern North Carolinian by choice, not by birth. He grew up in Mooreville, as did his wife, Lillian Chester Jones. His father, Wiley, was a policeman there and his mother, a Salley, still lives there.

"I was playing football when I was a sophomore in high school," he said, "and I broke my arm. Since I couldn't play, my coach asked me if I'd like to get on the P.A. and announce the games. Shortly afterward, I started working at the radio station. They paid me $10 a weekend to work 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. both Saturday and Sunday."

He and Mrs. Jones met while they were in high school. Mrs. Jones likes to tell the story: "Dick and a friend were pitching baseballs in the back yard of one of my friends. I ran out the back door wearing shorts. Dick turned to stare and got hit in the head with a baseball."

He asked her to attend a Lenior-Rhyme vs. Catawba College football game, and they began dating. They were married when he was 21 and she was 18.

After high school, he started working full time for radio stations, in Dillon and Darlington, S.C., in Salisbury and Fairmont before he moved his family to Washington, N.C. for his first television job.

When the Joneses got to Washington, they put down roots. Son, Eddie, now of Raleigh, and daughter, Tami Moseley, now of Chesapeake, Va., grew up there. Mrs. Jones has worked in the Beaufort County schools for many years.

"The Joneses expect a grandchild from their daughter in early July."

"I just can't wait to see the kid," Jones said. "That's going to be a great day for me."

The walls of Jones' den are lined with photographs of family and friends and mementoes of his varied activities. Among them are drawings and photographs from the Children's Network telethon.

"I've had a good time," he said. "For one of my shows, I called myself 'The Country Rover.' And I did do a lot of roving around this region. I've worked in everything from sports to farm news to regular news. I've done it all. I'm not a native of this region, but I've sure adopted it as my own. I love the people of eastern North Carolina, especially the children."

His love of children has been his motivation for his untiring work on the telethon.

"I love the fact that all the money raised each year stays here to meet medical needs of children not budgeted by the hospital," he said.

"I'm already making plans for next year's telethon. The special events are going to be the best ever."

Carol Lane is a reporter for The Daily Reflector in Greenville, and this story appeared in that newspaper June 12. The article has been edited because of space limitations.

Seven Deadly Sins Revisited

Summer sermon reruns? That and more.

Dr. Ed Lewis is pastor of First Presbyterian Church. He prefers to refer to his sermon topics during July and August as revisions.

Ten years ago, he said this week, he preached a seven-part series on as many Deadly Sins. The sins still are around, and they haven't changed, but he has updated his pulpit treatment of them.

"These messages are designed for saint and sinner alike," he said. "The series will focus on seven areas of life where people often have self-destructed."

His agenda:

- July 7 - Pride
- July 14 - Avarice
- July 21 - Envy
- July 28 - Gluttony
- Aug. 4 - Anger
- Aug. 18 - Lust
- Aug. 25 - Sloth.
