

Festival

have to do is be ready to order by Saturday.

Festival events will begin at 9 a.m. with a "Fun Run" and five kilometer race sponsored by the Mooresville Running Club. The Fun Run will begin at 9 a.m. at the intersection of Iredell Avenue and North Church Street. The 5K race will follow.

Race day registration is permitted and those interested in taking part in the race should be at the starting point in time to register. Debbie Szabo is the race director and this year's race sponsors are Lincoln Bank and Lake Norman Regional Medical Center.

All registered participants will receive a custom-designed t-shirt and trophies will be presented in all categories.

After the races, Festival attention will focus on Main Street. Throughout the day, Main Street will be closed to vehicle traffic and the street will be transformed into a booth-lined carnival midway.

Crafts, as you might have guessed, will be the featured item. Marcia McNeil, Festival director, has filled more than 80 booths with craftspeople from throughout North Carolina and neighboring states.

The selection of hand-crafted specialties ranges from wood carvings to quilts. The list of items to be featured includes baskets, dolls, puppets, wicker items, portraits, frames, pictures, bird feeders and many, many more.

Limited edition creations by local and regional artists will also be exhibited and sold at the Festival. Barbara Shoemaker's drawing of a Mooresville business landmark, D.E. Turner Hardware, is just one of the examples of the unique creations that will be available.

And speaking of local businesses, they too will play a big role in the Festival doings. Main Street merchants will be running sales and specials as part of the Festival celebration.

Other attractions will include antique car exhibits as well as booth displays on an assortment of topics including recycling, the arts, American Red Cross programs and the United Way as well as information about Habitat for Humanity, public education and many other subjects.

Food will also fill several booths. The food selection, prepared and served by civic clubs, church groups and participating restaurants, will include sausage and ham biscuits, hot apple pies, sandwiches, hot dogs and hamburgers, Polish sausages, baked goods, orangeade and lemonade, ice cream, frozen yogurt and other treats.

Entertainment will, as always, be a Festival feature throughout the day. Dancers, as mentioned, will take centerstage for most of the day. Other entertainment will include a pet parade and demonstrations by the Mooresville Police Department's newest detective, Corsea the drug-detecting dog.

There are other activities planned — too many to mention. The best advice is to make sure you bring along a good appetite for fun.

the morning of May 3, the day the girl came to him with the complaint. He said it is customary to ask the SBI to investigate charges involving a law-enforcement officer.

SBI Agent Joe Momier said investigation revealed that Johnson found the girl and a female companion parked on Buffalo Shoals Road around midnight May 2. The passenger was sick from drinking, Momier said, and Johnson stopped to investigate.

Momier would not release a arrest report or a picture of Johnson. He said District Attorney H.W. Zimmerman Jr. told him not to release the information because state law allows the SBI to keep arrest records and other documents confidential.

This morning, in speaking of the incident, Sheriff Lloyd Brant Johnson said he and his deputy, Officer [name], had been called to the scene and had

He is an active member of Saint Philip's Catholic Church.

Norris' plans include medical school with a specialization in orthopedics.

Fox is the son of Sandra Adams of Statesville. At South, he is a member of SADD as well as the Beta, Latin and Spirit clubs.

He is also a Junior Civitan, Junior Jaycee and a member of the Fordsters, honor choir and Close-Up. Fox has received the Presidential Academic Fitness Award, SAT Improvement Award and All-County Chorus honors. He was also selected for Who's Who.

He is a participant in the Iredell DARE program, a N.C. Scholar and a member of the National Junior Honor Society.

He is the recipient of the Sallie Southall Cotton scholarship, First Family scholarship at Catawba College, Wal-Mart scholarship, the President's scholarship for High Point College, the James V. Robertson scholarship, the Lake Norman Regional Medical Center scholarship and a scholarship to attend Wake Forest University.

He is a restorative care assistant at Brian Center in Statesville.

Hager is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Hager of Troutman. She is president of the Keywanettes, a student council representative, co-captain of the varsity tennis team and an outstanding Viking Senior.

She is a member of the French and Drama clubs, a Junior Jaycee and a N.C. Scholar. She has been class president in her sophomore, junior and senior years.

Hager is a member of Young Life, a March of Dimes volunteers and a volunteer for Special Olympics.

DeFehr said. "This new location will enable us to strengthen our service to Pallister's customers in the East and Southeast. We sell to a wide range of accounts throughout the U.S., including a majority of the top 100 retailers."

Founded in 1944, Pallister is the largest furniture manufacturer in Canada. The Troutman plant will be its first in North Carolina, which leads the nation in furniture production, and its second in this country. Its products include upholstered and leather pieces for homes and offices, wall and entertainment systems, occasional tables and bedroom furniture.

housed Hager's Fish Camp. It had been unoccupied some five years. Gallyon estimated the loss at $20,000 to the building and $5,000 to the contents.

The building was owned by the Hager estate. The fire marshal has not determined if the property was insured.

The Mount Mourne, Lake Norman and Shepherd volunteer fire departments responded to the 10:10 p.m. alarm, but the fire was out of control when the first units reached the scene. The Mooresville Rescue Squad also responded.

Bills

the Mooresville/South Iredell Chamber of Commerce want 50 percent of the revenue designated for this purpose.

Bryan, of Statesville, serves the four-county 26th District, which includes Iredell. Brawley lives in Mooresville, and South Iredell makes up the bulk of his 43rd District. Both legislators are Republicans.

Democrat Wayne Kahl represents the 42nd District, also in Iredell County. Bryan said this week his plan is to let Brawley's "motel tax" bill die in the Senate committee, to push his measure to passage in the Senate and, with Kahl's help, as a member of the majority party in the House, to get it into law.

Another Brawley bill would permit the Mooresville school district to satellite annex all areas satellite annexed by the town. This measure is in the House Local and Regional Government Committee. Kahl opposes it, and Bryan says he will fight the bill if it reaches the Senate. Bryan and Kahl say the bill would enable the Mooresville school district to acquire property now in the county school district, and it would enable Mooresville to levy its supplementary tax on the isolated areas without providing services, since no school children live in them.

Bryan said Brawley offered to permit half the occupancy tax to be used for tourism and promotion. Bryan would back the school district annexation. Bryan refused, and the impasse prompted his action today.

Atlas

Site clearing and construction will begin as soon as possible. Final financing arrangements are the remaining step in Atlas' plans.

At the Mooresville Business Park plant, Atlas will manufacture polypropylene plastics extrusion products primarily for the upholstery and carpet industries.

The company plans to employ approximately 60 workers initially. In three years, according to the company's presentation to the Iredell County Industrial Facilities and Pollution Control Financing Authority, Atlas expects to double its employee total to 120.

At that meeting, the industrial bonds commission authorized the issuance of $10 million in industrial bonds to finance the company's project.

In its discussion, the commission determined that the firm met air, water and land pollution guidelines and that the firm would have a pay scale above the county's current average.

The Mooresville Town Board also played a part in attracting the company. At a meeting Monday, the board voted to give Petropar a five-year exemption from annexation if it built a plant at the business park site.

Town Manager Rick McLean said this morning that the five-year period, which begins at the closing of the property purchase, was a negotiated point emphasized by the company's representatives.

Under existing town statutes, an individual property owner or business receiving access to town utilities must ask to be annexed at the board's discretion.

The town will also play a part in connecting the site to the town's water and sewer lines. Water is adjacent to the property, but an 1,800-foot sewer line extension is needed to connect the property to waste treatment services.

The town and the county will jointly finance the sewer line extension, which is expected to cost approximately $172,000.

McLean added that the extension will serve the proposed Atlas site and put sewer line access in place for four other parcels in the industrial park.

While utilities were vital, railroad access also played a major part in Atlas' decision. Homer Faulk, executive director of the Chamber, said railway availability in the industrial park was the key.

"They have been looking at us and a couple of other places for about two months," Faulk said, "and rail access was a primary point from day one. The site they picked is right on the rail line."

Faulk described the recruitment of Petropar's project as "fierce competition." One of the competitors was Rowan County and the other site on Petropar's "short list" was a location just outside of Atlanta, Ga.

"We're pleased to have them," Faulk said. "They should be a quality addition to our community."

DEBORAH O'NEIL

Miss O'Neil Earns BS Degree

2-Day Rodeo In Troutman

Deborah Lynn O'Neil, daughter of Ken and Linda O'Neil of Mooresville, received a bachelor of science degree in nursing during the May 11 commencement exercises at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte.

Miss O'Neil has accepted an internship in Maternal Child Nursing at Catawba Memorial Hospital in Hickory.

On its eastern loop around Davidson-Cornelius, the road will swing near Mount Mourne in Iredell, which is in the 12th Division and the Statesville District. Engineers here have taken no role in the project, much to the chagrin of rural Iredell residents who have been unable to obtain information regarding progress toward selecting the precise route of the road within the publicized broad corridor.

The show will begin at 8 p.m. each day in the event sanctioned by the Mid-Atlantic Rodeo Association. Admission will be $7 for adults and $5 for children between six and 12. Those younger than six will be admitted free.

Competitive events include bronc riding, calf roping, goat tying, barrel racing, bull riding and trick riding. The rescue squad also is coordinating a western days parade Saturday through downtown Troutman. All entries are welcome. Invitations to participate have gone to area civic, church, school and youth organizations, as well as horse riders and owners of old farm equipment.

Art Exchange Creates Display At Brawley School

Brawley Middle School art teacher Kathy Bullard and librarian Lib MacIntosh examine a library display of artworks created by fourth, fifth and sixth graders at Kayenta Middle School in Kayenta, Ariz. The art pieces, along with brochures and pamphlets about the Kayenta community and a copy of that school's yearbook, were sent to Brawley as part of an artistic exchange. Brawley students also sent art pieces along with letters and photos of the local area to Kayenta, a community where approximately 95 percent of the children are Navajo Indians. Most of the art from Kayenta reflects, in some way, the lifestyle and cultures of the Kayenta area and the exchange is being used at both schools as a learning tool not only for art, but also cultural studies.

"This certainly will not be the last chance to speak on this project," he said Tuesday, "but it will be an excellent opportunity to speak. In fact, gathering public opinion on road projects within the division is the whole point to the meeting."

Bissett said public hearings on the Davidson-Cornelius "outer loop" will be held in the immediate area involved in October and in April of next year. He encouraged citizens to attend any and all DOT meetings.

NC DOT has 14 divisions and each has districts. Every division and every district has an engineer who is responsible for its work. Dan Golis is engineer for the 10th District headquartered in Albemarle and serves Mecklenburg, Anson, Cabarrus, Stanly and Union counties. Alvin Hough is district engineer for Mecklenburg. Both will attend tomorrow's meeting.

Also expected is Jim Nance of Albemarle, a member of the N.C. Board of Transportation who represents the 10th Division. Other DOT people from Raleigh will attend, although Bissett will not.

DOT held a meeting in Cornelius in early March to explain plans for the half-circle beltway that will connect with Interstate 77 at each end. The south end will tie in at Sam Furr Road between Cornelius and Huntersville in Mecklenburg. The northern intersection is not fixed, but Bissett said this week it almost certainly will be at Langtree Road in South Iredell. Probably not at U.S. 21-Williamson Road because of commercial development and historic properties there, he said.

On its eastern loop around Davidson-Cornelius, the road will swing near Mount Mourne in Iredell, which is in the 12th Division and the Statesville District. Engineers here have taken no role in the project, much to the chagrin of rural Iredell residents who have been unable to obtain information regarding progress toward selecting the precise route of the road within the publicized broad corridor.

St. Jude Hospital Plans Bike-A-Thon In Mooresville

A Bike-A-Thon, sponsored by St. Jude Children's Research Hospital in Memphis, Tenn., is scheduled to be held in Mooresville June 1, according to Kerry Stoots, the event's local coordinator.

The Bike-A-Thon will be held between 8 a.m. and 1 p.m., beginning at Mooresville Junior High School and covering a route in the vicinity of the school.

Churches are being requested to cooperate by opening their restrooms and as refreshment sites.

There will be a booth open in town during Lake Norman Festival Days at which time interested bikers and walkers may register to participate in the event.

Posters, calling attention to the Bike-A-Thon, have been placed in the schools and elsewhere in Mooresville.

St. Jude Children's Research Hospital was founded by entrepreneur Danny Thomas. The institution opened its doors to the public in 1962 to combat catastrophic diseases which afflict children. It is non-sectarian, non-discriminatory, and provides total medical care to all patients.

At St. Jude, scientists and physicians are working side-by-side seeking not only a better means of treatment, but also the causes, cures and prevention of these terrible killers.

All findings and information gained at the hospital are shared freely with doctors and hospitals all over the world.

This year's Bike-A-Thon program is dedicated to Brooke Simon, a six-year-old solid tumor patient at St. Jude Children's Research Hospital.

Simon developed a malignant tumor in her abdomen, and, after surgery, was treated with radiation and chemotherapy. She has now been taken off all therapy and is in remission. Although she isn't cured of her cancer, as long as she has people helping her through the Bike-A-Thon program, there is always hope.

Rain date for the Bike-A-Thon in Mooresville is June 8.

Interested persons may obtain additional information by contacting Kerry Stoots, phone (704) 663-8873.
