Rabies Shots Offered At County Sites

It's that time of year again: flowers are blooming, lawnmowers are busy, and rabies clinics are being planned by the Iredell County Animal Control Department.

The clinics, offering rabies vaccinations for pets, will be held throughout the county. The animal control office operates the clinics in various locations to make it as convenient as possible for pet owners to get their pets the shots they need and are required by law to receive.

The rabies shots at every clinic location will be $5 per animal.

The clinics will be held this Saturday and on June 1. The schedule, and location, of Iredell clinics.

May 16 is Teller Appreciation Day at First Union National Bank, and the bank would like its customers to join in the salute.

Mark Brady, the bank's Mooresville executive, had this comment early this week:

Teaching Fellows Graduate

A student from Mooresville is a member of the first graduating class of North Carolina Teaching Fellows at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte.

Stephanie Carol Coggins, a mathematics and social studies major from Mooresville, is a Teaching Fellow and a member of UNCC's 1991 graduating class.

To attract some of the brightest students into teaching, the 1986 North Carolina General Assembly established this program, which provides $5,000 each year per students. In exchange, the graduates are obligated to teach in the state for each year they held grants.

The 11 graduates are the first of many because four classes have now enrolled totalling 102 students at UNCC.
