Year Of Hardships, Determination

The past four years have been the best and worst of times for Iredell County's Cheryl Johnson-Smith, who graduated May 12 with a degree from the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

In her sophomore year, her father died unexpectedly. Then her grandfather suffered a debilitating stroke.

And last August she got married—earlier than originally planned—after learning that her fiance, a member of the 18th Airborne Corps at Fort Bragg, would be sent to the Persian Gulf in a matter of weeks.

Johnson-Smith's husband, Steve, returned in March and was discharged May 10 in time to see her graduate. "Before leaving for the gulf he made me promise that I would not quit school," she said.

The six months he was gone "seemed like six years," she said.

But I would not think about dropping out. I knew in the long run I would be able to talk by phone. She purposely limited the number of news reports she would watch on the gulf war, and that "helped keep me sane," she said.

On the weekends she would go home to Union Grove to help her family and the weekdays were devoted to UNCG.

Johnson-Smith admits that she gave serious thought to quitting school during the spring semester of 1988. Her father had died shortly before Christmas 1988, leaving her mother, Brenda, to care for Johnson-Smith's then 14-month-old brother, Jarred.

"They needed me at home and I needed to see Steve, who was at Fort Bragg, and then there was school," she said. "I was pulled in three different directions."

But I would not think about dropping out. I knew in the long run I would be able to talk by phone. She purposely limited the number of news reports she would watch on the gulf war, and that "helped keep me sane," she said.

On the weekends she would go home to Union Grove to help her family and the weekdays were devoted to UNCG.

Johnson Smith hadn't planned on going to UNCG. She was set to enroll in the University of Pennsylvania, where she would play basketball. At 6 feet 1 inch, she had played the sport at North Iredell High School. But tendonitis and a strong desire to be closer to home changed her mind.

Her major of communication education also wasn't her first choice. Spanish was to have been her major and speech her minor. That all changed after her first semester as a student teacher in Grimsley High School's Department of Speech and Drama. She recently directed two student plays with only three and a half weeks preparation time. "I really enjoy working with the kids," she said.

She has spent most of the past semester as a student teacher in Grimsley High School's Department of Speech and Drama. She recently directed two student plays with only three and a half weeks preparation time. "I really enjoy working with the kids," she said.

Her ideal job would include coaching basketball as well as teaching, she said. She hopes to find a teaching position near or in Iredell County so she can be close to her family. Graduate school in 1992 also is an option she is keeping open.

Johnson-Smith has learned first-hand that life isn't always fair.

"No matter how difficult things seem, they don't stay horribly bad. Something will happen to make you smile a little," Johnson-Smith said. "If I didn't believe that I never would have made it through."

Her advice to other students is simple: once you make the commitment to school, stick with it no matter what difficulties may arise.

Reunited Johnson-Smith and husband Steve

Q. What's the real story with Madonna and Michael Jackson? Are they going to make a record together? Ronnie A.

A. Recently, Madonna was interviewed in the Advocate Magazine, America's largest gay publication, and stated: "I would like to completely redo his whole image ... and I want to get him out of those buckled boots and all that stuff. The thing is, I'm not going to get together and do some stupid ballad or love song — no one's going to buy it, first of all. I said, 'Michael, if you want to do something with me, you have to be willing to go all the way or I'm not going to do it.' He keeps saying yes."
