Salmon

ROBERT CASHION

Salmon almost always return to the precise fresh water areas where they were born. Although some straying has been recorded most salmon using an incredible homing instinct return to the exact stream where they were born, to spawn and die.

For thousands of years, salmon have left fresh water streams, struggled to unknown places in the Atlantic or Pacific, then returned inland, reproduced and died. Not many persons other than fishermen ever see the salmon running; fewer see them spawning.

Some salmon migrate several thousand miles from the time they leave the river where born until they return to die. A Chinook salmon tagged in the Central Aleutian Islands and recovered a year later in the Salmon River in Idaho, traveled 3,500 miles.

Red or sockeye salmon is the choice canned salmon. The flesh is a deep salmon color and the fish has considerable oil. Chum salmon is the least expensive, is light in color along with Pink salmon which is also economical.

Consider the versatility of salmon when planning your menus. Available fresh, frozen and canned the colorful fish is a complete protein.

Also, consider the versatility of Cashion's. We have a complete selection of your favorite foods, that are always priced right ... for our favorite customers.
