All over community, hearts & wallets keep opening for victims

By JAIME GATTON

A young boy handed a police officer a Ziploc bag full of coins and asked him to get it to the Red Cross.

A veteran of World War II, the Korean War and Vietnam stopped by the South Iredell chapter of the American Red Cross and donated $2,000.

Because of the crowd, about 300 people had to be turned away from last week's Mooresville blood drive.

And that's only a glimpse into the community's outpouring of support for victims of last week's terrorist attacks in New York

Displaying their patriotism, United Way supporters cheer the cross-country cyclists' arrival.

'I love life' is anthem of cancer survivors

Fundraiser features 17 teams of walkers

By JAIME GATTON

To Sadie Ott, who walks 18 miles a week, the walk around Mooresville High School's track during last weekend's Relay for Life was a breeze.

But the message behind it wasn't.

Ott, who lives in Tampa, Fla., but has family in Mooresville, has been cancer-free for 21 years, thanks in part to the American Cancer Society, and even more to Ott's desire to live.

"I love life," Ott said, as she took a short break from walking Friday night. "I thank God every day, because I want to live."

The Relay for Life is the signature fundraiser for the American Cancer Society. Mooresville hosted the event several years ago, but this year kicked off what will become an annual event for the town.

Seventeen teams of 10-15 walkers congregated on the Mooresville High School football field and camped out there Friday night. Teams represented area churches, schools, business and media. To participate, each team member raised $100 to go toward patient services, research and advocacy for the American Cancer Society.

About 600 luminaries purchased in honor or in memory of loved ones who have battled cancer lined the track and spelled out "Hope" on

New fire chief eyes a smooth transition

By MICHAEL ROESSLER

Meet Wesley Greene, Mooresville's new fire chief.

Greene, hired late last week, got his start in the business as a volunteer firefighter in Stokes County. Then he spent 15 years with the Winston-Salem department, four as captain. It was then onto Mt. Airy, where he has served as chief since 1993.

The move from Mt. Airy to Mooresville should be smooth for Greene. Mt. Airy's fire department has one station and 26 members, while Mooresville's has two stations and 34 members.

"I began my career as a volunteer firefighter in Stokes County. My father was one of the charter members of the fire department, and I followed in his footsteps, eventually becoming chief of that

Big waterway cleanup yields 2 tons of trash

Toys, cans, tires and a deer carcass were among the two tons of garbage picked up Saturday in Iredell County during the North Carolina Big Sweep waterway litter pickup.

About 40 volunteers gathered at Lake Norman State Park and other shorelines in Iredell County with gloves and plastic bags to pick up what others had left behind.

Development has affected natural habitats and water sources, as evidenced by 4,000 pounds of garbage found during the cleanup.

Volunteers got dirty gathering 30 tires, 68 bags of garbage, 39 pieces of treated wood and hunks of Styrofoam.

Much of the garbage was found farther back in the woods rather than on the shoreline. This required volunteers to battle slapping twigs and spiderwebs to reach partially buried bottles and pieces of plastic.

"Garbage gets deposited back there because of the wash line," said Maureen Colwell, Big Sweep coordinator. Water rises during
