leaves the bill will pass.

The legislation would provide a government subsidy so that domestic textile mills could buy American cotton at a price competitive with foreign mills.

The industry wants a direct subsidy of 8½ cents a pound—the difference between the high support price it must pay for cotton and the lower, world cotton market price, paid by foreign mills.

For years the government has been paying exporters an 8½ cent subsidy so they can move American cotton into the world market.

Domestic mills have turned in recent years to synthetic fabrics.

Said McCormack: "Certainly, if any industry is deserving of legislation it is the textile industry. It employs hundreds of thousands of Americans. The two-price system . . . has placed it in a disadvantageous position to foreign competition."

McCormack said the administration supports the bill and "I hope the equity of the case will appeal to Republican members as well as Democrats."

The Agriculture Department has estimated the new subsidy would cost the taxpayers $250 million a year.

Discussing the topic, "Development Of The Presbyterian Church In The Carolinas," Dr. Hollis traced the history of the denomination from its early days, as it moved southward into the Carolinas.

According to Mr. Hollis, the early-day Presbyterian in North Carolina and South Carolina was a more violent and pleasure-seeking character than his conservative descendants like to admit.

Many of the early Presbyterians were Scotch-Irish pioneers whose descendants "have, been perhaps inclined to over-praise their virtues," he continued.

"More discerning observers have commented upon their propensity for violence and bedonistic (pleasure-seeking) tendencies," Dr. Hollis said. One historian, he remarked, said the Scotch-Irish arrived in North Carolina "determined to keep God's commandments and everything else he could get his hands on."

Dr. Hollis described how Presbyterianism grew despite the fact the British burned their churches, the congregations split over such things as hymn-singing, and the "Age of Reason" hurt all churches.

"During the Revolutionary War, Presbyterians were usually ardent partisans of the Patriot cause," Dr. Hollis recalled. He said one British major branded all Presbyterian churches "rebellion shops" and ordered some churches burned.

But the worst effect of the war, the historian said, was its "profoundly anti-religious impact."

"Wars usually disrupt religious activity. Further, the Revolutionary generation coincided with the Age of Reason, which brought only two students at Princeton, which had been established in 1774, by the Presbyterians, returned Christianity."

Dr. Hollis said that in 1800 "Presbyterian congregations in the Carolinas were holly divided by the issue of slavery."

Zoning

such an arrangement would not be equitable. The commissioners felt the entire perimeter area should get the same control. The board withdrew its request that the county zone the perimeter.

City Manager Cy Brooks was directed to determine what must be done for the town to extend its zoning authority to cover the perimeter. The first step is to double the size of the town's five-member planning board by appointing to it five representatives of the area to be zoned.

Meanwhile, this perimeter is back the way it was—without any zoning restrictions.

READY FOR ANYTHING—Members of Scout Troop 164 at First Presbyterian Church were loaded for bear and anything else that might happen Saturday morning as they prepared to begin a march from the church for an overnight camping trip at the scout campsite at Shepherd. Scoutmaster Tom Pilgreen, at the head of the rather irregular column, is set to give the "move 'em out" order. Boys who took part in the weekend excursion (and who enjoyed perfect camping weather for a change) were Asa McNeely Jr., John Gravelly Jr., Billy Gravelly, Reid Stutts, Scott Stutts, Mitchell Mack Jr., Charles Rader, Franklin Rader, Ronald Gragg, Richard Gragg, Tony Watkins, Craig Watkins, David Baker, Rodney Proctor and Dave McCraw.

The smog is worse late evenings and nights. City Manager Cy Brooks said the town will make every effort to burn trash early in the day. He said private individuals had been dumping debris into the pit at night, but that this practice had been stopped.

The Town Board directed Brooks to remedy the problem, by whatever means necessary. Brooks said he will begin covering garbage in a landfill, and will continue burning such wastes as paper and tree limbs.

MRS. JOHN McLAIN RAYER, JR.

Rayer-Kiser Nuptials Spoken In Saturday Evening Ceremony

The wedding of Miss Evelyn Ruth Kiser and John McLain Rayer, Jr. was solemnized in a love-ly ceremony on Saturday, November 2, in the Cavin Chapel at Huntersville. The Rev. Dwight Baker, pastor of Ramoth Presbyterian Church, officiated at 6 p. m.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James David Kiser of North Vincent street, Shelby, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John McLain Rayer, Sr. of Huntersville, route 2.

The wedding vows were spoken in a lovely setting of greenery with numerous candelabra holding lighted tapers. A central arrangement of white gladioli and chrysanthemums added to the beauty of the setting.

Nuptial music was rendered by Dr. William A. Davis, Jr., organist, and Larry J. Dove, soloist. Vocal selections included "I Love Thee," "Whither Thou Goest" and for the benediction, at which time the bride couple knelt, "Wedding Prayer."

The traditional wedding march was used for the procession and the recessional.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of white satin brocade designed with a chapel train. Her shoulder length veil of illusion was attached to a circlet of orange blossoms centered with pearls, and a cluster of orange blossoms accented the front of the headpiece. She carried a prayerbook topped with a white orchid showered with staphisanthia and English ivy.

Miss Letticia Harris, of Denton, was maid of honor. She wore an emerald green velvet dress designed with a bell-shaped skirt and accented with a velvet flower at the waistline. Her headpiece was a matching velvet flower with a short veil. She wore a single-strand of pearls and white gloves. She carried a cascade bouquet of autumn colored chrysanthemums cascaded with English ivy.

Following a honeymoon trip to the mountains of North Carolina, the couple will make their home in Huntersville.
