Cornelius police officers Henry Cook, David Baucum, Daniel Blackhorse and Ian Clawson began patrolling Lake Norman's shoreline on June 1.

Cornelius launches new lake patrol boat

By LORRAINE CONLON

"Free as the wind; sprightly as fire; lovingly as water, and as safe as the earth itself."

Such was the blessing Cornelius Police Chief Ron McKinney bestowed on the town's new police patrol boat, a Boston Whaler that was launched last week from the Peninsula Yacht Club.

Cornelius is the first municipality on Lake Norman to have its own law enforcement patrol boat. The craft was purchased as surplus from the Norfolk Naval Yard, then refurbished by volunteers from the Cornelius Police Department.

"The town of Cornelius has between 50 to 70 miles of shoreline" on Lake Norman, McKinney pointed out. "This boat will provide us with a special facility to address the needs of our residents."

The launching ceremony was conducted by Mayor Pro Tem Thurman Ross, because Mayor Jan Beasley was out of town. He made a short speech concerning the growth of the town and the growth of its needs and ended by saying how this was one of many services the town is providing for its residents.

After the blessing of the boat, Ross followed naval tradition by christening the boat by breaking a bottle of champagne on it.

The shore patrol of Lake Norman's Cornelius shoreline has already begun. The boat is manned by four officers who have each volunteered several hours per week.

The program will include routine preventive patrol, sup-
