A closer refuge

Work begins on crucial battered women's shelter

By JAIME GATTON

Last week, a group of people stood on what one man called "Holy Ground" — land that will soon give way to a southern Iredell house where women who are "in need, in pain, broken and alienated" can seek shelter.

Ground was officially broken Thursday in Troutman at the new site for Iredell County's battered women's shelter — My Sister's House.

"It is a good day," he continued — a day to celebrate "that which has happened and that which is to be."

My Sister's House is Iredell County's only shelter for battered women. The new 9,200-square-foot, eight-bedroom and 32-bed shelter could be ready as early as mid-January, relocated from its current spot in a crime-ridden section of south Statesville to a quiet, secluded area in Troutman. It will be much more convenient for Mooresville-area women.

And with the number of women and children seeking shelter rapidly decreasing, the move couldn't come at a better time, said Fifth Street's Administrative Director, Neil Furr. "In the past year, it's slowed down to a trickle compared to what it was in the past."

But, he said, that's not good news.

"There's been so much publicity about the south Statesville area and the problems with crime there," Furr said. "The state came in and said the shelter can't be renovated. It doesn't look good, and people are a little scared of the area."

Town redraws boundaries of voting districts

Population shift gives District 2 biggest change

By MICHAEL ROESSLER

When Mooresville voters go to the polls this fall, they may be voting for a different town representative than in years past.

At a special meeting of the Mooresville Town Board last week, commissioners unanimously approved a plan to amend the town's voting districts because of population changes reflected in the 2000 census. A previous plan to redraw the districts was discarded because of concerns about minority representation on the board.

Commissioner Franklin Campbell, the board's only black member, had expressed concern about that plan because District 2, which had a majority of black constituents when drawn in the 1980s and 1990s, would have had less than 30 percent black residents.

Under the plan adopted last week, nearly 34 percent of District 2's residents will be black. The total minority population will be more than 40 percent, including Hispanics.

When the districts were redrawn after the 1990 census, District 2 was more than two-thirds black.

"I'm satisfied," Campbell said. "Considering that blacks are spread out, this was the best that we could do." He added that the relatively small black population in town — composing only 14 percent

Popular comedy club gets its laughs here now

By JAIME GATTON

Everyone's laughing at Mooresville's Images Nightlife. Laughing in it. Laughing with it. Well, just laughing.

Images, the newest Mooresville nightclub, recently bought the rights to The Comedy Zone after the popular club on Independence Boulevard closed.

The Comedy Zone at Lake Norman officially opened with its first round of comedians on June 7, when 249 people packed the night club just wanting to get a good laugh.

This latest endeavor makes the second limb Images has walked out on. The first was opening three months ago in a building that was previously home to two ill-fated restaurants — The Checkered Flag and Victor's — within a three-year period.

And now, officials have opened The Comedy Zone, a couple of years after another comedy club in the Water Tower Plaza shopping center floundered and was replaced by Jack Wabbits Grille and No. 7 Saloon.

Bur Skipper Krees, general manager of Images, says he's confident
