Community Chaff BY TOM MCKNIGHT

Meet Judge Richardson Preyer

The people of North Carolina are fortunate in having two able men seek the gubernatorial office in 1964.

Dan Moore of Canton is a man of good stature, dedicated to the proposition that this office demands political honesty and personal integrity. He would make North Carolina an acceptable Governor.

Richardson Preyer of Greensboro has the better all-round qualifications of the two candidates for this office. He would make North Carolina a great and outstanding Governor.

There are those who say one weakness in Preyer's armor lies in the fact that he has never been active in politics, knows nothing about the rough-and-tumble political tactics needed in a contest of this kind.

There are others, and this reporter is among them, who believe this may constitute a valuable asset. Stump politicians have become a dime a dozen, and the fruit of their handiwork leaves much to be desired.

Judge Preyer's intimate associates reveal he is a very quiet and sensitive person whose conception of the purpose of government is of the highest character. We'll swap, at any time and for any office, this approach to a public trust over the razzle-dazzle of flowery speeches and empty promises.

Richardson Preyer comes from one of North Carolina's wealthiest families. His family founded and still owns and operates the Vick Chemical combine with its subsidiaries. At the same time, this family has given more of its wealth away, to hospitals, colleges, churches, and charity institutions, than any other family in North Carolina. A good mashe shot from our office, for instance, lies Richardson Field at Davidson College, largely a gift from Richardson Preyer's family.

To see and talk with Judge Preyer, you wouldn't suspect that he has a dime beyond the needs of the day. He is a man of modest dress, habits and talk, quiet, unobtrusive, and possessing one of the most brilliant minds in North Carolina.

In 1956 he was appointed Judge of Superior Court by Governor Luther Hodges. Preyer, a brilliant lawyer in his own right, did not seek the appointment, was at first a bit reluctant to consider it. Hodges said he appointed Preyer, not only because of his ability, but because he seemed to be the unanimous choice of the legal profession and the people of Guilford county.

Five years later, in 1961, the office of U. S. Federal Judge for the North Carolina Middle District became vacant. There was a strong and almost unanimous popular demand in the District for the appointment of Richardson Preyer. The post paid $35,000 a year and was a life-time appointment. As was the case in his Superior Court judgeship, the financial remuneration was less than Preyer could earn in his lucrative private law practice. But again, as was the case in the Superior Court appointment, it was a duty call to public service. At the behest of the people, Governor Sanford recommended him and Kennedy appointed him. As far as Preyer was concerned, there was no politics behind the appointment. He did not seek the appointment, accepted it only in the spirit of duty as a public service.

When a spontaneous "People for Preyer" movement gathered overwhelming force in the Guilford area, he succumbed to the pressure of his admirers, resigned his Federal judgeship and consented to be a candidate for Governor.

From the day he put out his law shingle in Greensboro until this day, Judge Preyer has had little interest in backdoor politics or politicians.

CIVIC LEADER: Many of Judge Preyer's civic activities have generously benefited the entire state, while others have been of a community nature (as represented by Greensboro's 1954 Distinguished Service Award as "Young Man of the Year").

He was first chairman of a special committee which pioneered facilities for treatment of the chronically ill, thus starting a movement now in progress throughout the South. He currently is chairman of the North Carolina Citizens Committee for Better Schools, serves on the Board of Trustees of the North Carolina Symphony, is a member of the education-oriented Board of Visitors for Davidson College, and is or has been a leader in more than 20 other programs of direct civic benefit on a community or statewide level.

BUSINESSMAN: Judge Preyer's administrative experience dates back to World War II. During his four years in the Navy, he became Executive Officer of the Destroyer Preston directing 340 men and 20 officers. Following the war and law school he was trained in administrative duties of the Vick Chemical Co. His latest administrative responsibilities have been as president of the organization, by virtue of his election Monday, he is a member of the Society's board of directors and its executive committee.

The meeting began Sunday in the Sir Walter Hotel and continued through Wednesday, with a number of outstanding leaders in the field of recreation speaking and taking part in workshops and seminars. The theme of the conference was "The Performing Arts in Recreation," and special emphasis was placed on recreation programs for the elderly.

Bill Sapp of Lumberton was installed as president of the organization, and Ray Kinsh of High Point began a term as president-elect.

Baber, a 30-year-old Mount Airy native, has headed the local recreation program since August 1961. He came here as assistant recreation director in February 1959. An Army veteran, Baber is a graduate of the University of North Carolina.

In Mooresville, he is active in church and civic activities. He is married and the father of three children.

Officials of the Mooresville Merchants Association said they have scheduled the lights installation project next week in order to have the downtown decorated for the Christmas parade December 3.

"Since we can't order the kind of weather we need to put up the lights," one official said, "we have to plan well in advance in case we have a delay."

Mrs. Jack Duffy, Merchants Association secretary, said the lights will rent this year for $1,500. She explained that all fixtures will be new, and the theme of the lights and their arrangement will be "something different for our citizens to enjoy."

Mooresville's seasonal street lighting project is a cooperative effort spearheaded and directed by the Merchants Association. The cost of the lights is handled through the Mooresville Christmas Lighting Fund, to which association members and many other firms and individuals contribute.

The Junior Chamber of Commerce, sponsor of the traditional parade that launches the Christmas shopping season in town, last week made a $250 contribution to the lighting fund. Most association members made contributions, in addition to their dues, to the special fund.

Baber was installed in the office for a one-year term Monday during the annual conference of the society in Raleigh. He was one of two members-at-large chosen by the more than 400 professional recreationists participating in the session.

Every municipality in the state that supports a recreation program was represented at the conference.

Baber previously had served in various capacities in the state organization. By virtue of his election Monday, he is a member of the Society's board of directors and its executive committee.

Uncle Dan From Doolie Says:

DEAR MISTER EDITOR:

I reckon it's natural for a feller that's gitting old and coming down to the sunset of his day to ponder over the future with one eye on the past and not get too excited over neither one. When a man is approaching the 3-score-and-10 marker he sorter takes ever day as it comes. As a general rule, that ain't true of his old lady. She goes to bed ever night knowing tomorrow will be better. But the women folks ain't very practical in these matters.

What brings this to mind was a piece I was reading yesterday from the U. S. Department of Agriculture where power vehicles has replaced 27 million horses and mules on the road and on the farm in the last 35 years. The piece went on to say this had "saved" 65 million acres of land that was needed in hay for these horses and mules.

You will recollect here awhile back that Senator Williams reported the Department of Agriculture spent $1.1 billion in tax money in 1962 to farmers to take 54 million acres out of farm production. And on account of this being hard on the line and fertilizer business, the Government had to pay them boys 200 million.

We pick up 65 million hay giving 54 million acres of it

Christmas Lighting Gift From Jaycees

Richard Barber, right, president of the Mooresville Junior Chamber of Commerce, presents a $250 check to A. V. Lowery, chairman of the Mooresville Merchants Association's Christmas lighting committee. The Jaycees sponsor the town's Christmas parade each year, and in turn the club contributes toward the cost of renting the decorative lighting for the main shopping district. The Merchants Association plans to erect the lights November 19.

10-County Safety Council Plans Mooresville Meeting

The Central Piedmont Safety Council of the North Carolina Industrial Commission will meet in Mooresville next Tuesday, November 19, it was announced today by H. S. Baucum of Raleigh, safety director of the commission.

The dinner meeting, which is expected to draw some 250 industrial plant heads, will be the council's 10-county area, will be held at the War Memorial Building, getting underway at 7:30 p. m.

Hosts for the meeting will be Mooresville Mills and Cascade Weaving Company.

The keynote speaker will be the Rev. Thomas Stephens Haggal of High Point, a well-known, "businessman's preacher," and radio commentator, for whose work a national foundation has been formed.

Counties which make up the Central Piedmont Safety Council are Rockingham, Guilford, Randolph, Stokes, Forsyth, Davidson, Davie, Yadkin, Surry, and Iredell.

Chairman of the council is Dayton Crews of Winston-Salem. Only 35 years of age and thus a relative newcomer to the nation's fraternity of noted speakers, Mr. Haggal's upward spiral in popularity is well known.

Talking about land, Ed Doolittle said he was over in another county the other day and saw a sign where a feller had it posted this way:

No Hunin No Flutin No Nothin

Ed allowed as how that was what he'd see to a very unfriendly landowner.

Well, Mister Editor, the political rumblings for 1964, both in the primaries and general election, is starting to rumble. For the next 12 months, to hear them candidates talk, they won't be nothing too good for "the common man."
