The nine-week training schedule includes naval orientation, history and organization, seamanship, ordnance and gunnery, military drill, physical fitness, first aid and survival.

During the training recruits receive tests and interviews which determine their future assignments in the Navy. Upon completing the program they are assigned to service schools for technical instruction or to ships and stations for on-the-job training in a Navy rating specialty.

Winter is the season of indecision at the Tribune offices. Nobody can agree on just where to set the thermostat.

According to the male contingent at the place, our two charming young ladies, Mary Perry and Juanita Davis, are suffering from "low blood." They freeze to death if the office temperature drops below 80 degrees Fahrenheit. And according to Mary and Juanita, the men have Eskimo blood. They burn up if the thermometer shows anything above freezing.

The result is a constant tug of war, with the thermostat caught in the middle. Everett will come in on a cold morning and push the thermostat up to about 72 degrees. Juanita will come in a half hour later and very casually push the button up to 80 degrees. Very casually, mind you, just lean over and push it up as she comes up the hallway, without missing stride. Len will start frying back in his office and very casually push it down to 60 as he passes up the hallway. The place starts cooling off a bit and Mary will make a trip down the hallway and very casually push it back up to 85. In a few minutes J. W. will start sweating around the collar and take a trip down the hall, very casually pushing the button down to 60 as he passes by.

The strange thing about this thermostat phenomenon is that nobody has ever been able to catch anybody touching the button. Juanita goes so far as to claim she has never touched the button in all the years she has been working there. Sullivan goes even further and swears he didn't even know we had a thermostat.

Why all of them haven't died from a combination of tropical heat and pneumonia, this reporter will never know. Reminds me of a perm I once read:

"Beneath this slab lies what is left Of Mrs. Saphronia Stone— In life she never learned to leave The thermostat alone."

We were predicting in this corner the other week that Barry Goldwater, as a candidate for President, would be in hot water around the country trying to explain some of the wild statements he has made in the last couple years.

Newsweek magazine nailed him to the cross with one last week. In an interview, they asked him why he had voted for the $8 billion agricultural appropriation bill when he had been demanding a "prompt and final termination" of the farm subsidy program.

Goldwater denied he had voted for the bill. Whereupon Newsweek confronted him with the records showing he had paired for the bill. The Arizona Senator promptly went back and requested his vote be changed. For a presidential candidate, Barry Barry seems to be a very confused man. For that reason, among others, we still believe that Richard Nixon will be the Republican nominee.

Goldwater belongs to that cult of politicians whose creed is: "When you don't have the answers, it is always wise to have replies." Unable to gain yardage on some of his confused statements, Goldwater is constantly dropping back to punt. He is, for sooth, developing into one of the best punters we've seen in recent campaigns.

Closer home, it would seem from the chain of events around the state that Richardson Preyer is far out in front at the moment in the North Carolina gubernatorial stakes. He is certainly far out in front in Iredell. Sunday afternoon we attended a little get-together of some of the boys who work the precincts in Coddle Creek. The setup was solid for Preyer. Add this strength to the big vote Preyer will get from the unorganized segment and we think it is safe to say that Preyer will be high man in Coddle Creek by a wide margin.

We like the new trend among junketing Congressmen. For years now those boys have been vacationing at taxpayer expense all over the world accompanied by shapely secretaries, kinfolks and the like. But now one of them takes the head waiter in the House dining room on a nice outing to Paris.

House Speaker John McCormack says this could only happen in a land of opportunity such as America. We think this is simply wonderful! This paves the way for truck drivers, plumbers, paper hangers and, who knows, maybe country editors.

Where Russian authorities, long bemoaning the "decadence" of morals in the Western World, perused the American magazine "Playboy" to photograph 40 of the prettiest Russian women for a pin-up layout to be sold in this country. Of the 40, says Newsweek, 12 were photographed in the nude. Ole Nikita Khrushchev will probably explain this at the United Nations as "Operation Comrade Cheesecake."

Where the Washington bureaucrats have come up with still another new word, "groupmanship." We presume it means a sort of political togetherness.

Jaycees Slate Toys For Tots Drive Dec. 1

Mooreville Jaycees will conduct a community-wide collection drive for repairable toys Sunday, December 1.

All residents who would like to contribute to the club's "Toys for Tots" project have been asked to bring their contributions in front of their homes near the street.

Frank Loftin is serving as chairman of the "Toys for Tots" campaign this year. Working with him on the toy committee are Jim Roser, Don Whitlow, Roy Church and Joe Troutman.

Arrangements for the collection drive are largely in the hands of the special committee, but every Jaycee will be involved in repairing the toys.

While the club is asking for all kinds of used playthings, gifts of new toys, needless to say, are especially welcomed.

"Fixing up these hand-me-down toys really is a labor of love," Loftin said, "it's a job that makes a lot of sense."

'Tis The Night For Christmas Light Project

The reason Christmas lights weren't put up downtown Tuesday night is simple enough: the rented fixtures didn't get here in time.

Come tonight (Thursday), the freight schedule and the weather permitting, the all new lights will be erected along Main and Broad streets.

In anticipation of the lights installation project, the Christmas lighting committee of the Mooreville Merchants Association has asked a favor of all Mooreville motorists.

The request is this: please don't park in the downtown section of Main street after 6 p. m. tonight. Cars parked in the area to be decorated make the work most difficult, in some cases in past years, the lights installation crews have had to locate the owners of cars and have the vehicles moved before they could continue their work.

Once more: you will be doing your town a service if you will avoid parking on downtown Main street tonight. The off-street parking lots are almost as handy as you.

Uncle Dan From Doolie Says:

DEAR MISTER EDITOR: You will recollect ole Khrushchev told this fellow Tito a while back that what he was aiming to do was to bury the capitalists. I was going to "bury" us as that they was going to bury us under production, not dirt.

I was reading some figures this week from the U. S. Department of Agriculture that might upset Khrushchev's time table, maybe his stumblin'.

This country has cut crop acreage by 50 million acres but the surplus is still piling up. By 1980, this piece says, another 50 million crop acres will have to be retired and we'll still be able to feed our entire population. The surplus is still piling up. By 1980, this piece says, another 50 million crop acres will have to be retired and we'll still be able to feed our entire population. The surplus is still piling up.

I bring this item up at the country store Saturday night and some of the fellers thought this was mighty good. Zeke Grubb reported he had saw in the papers the other day where the war-houses was bursting out, more was being built, and the Government was about to shell out $5 billion more for surplus. Furthermore, Zeke announced, it was predicted that now since the growers have voted controls off wheat, we might have to use the Grand Canyon for storage.

Big Hookum showed us how they was a chand the country might run plum out of money by 1980 but farm production looked safe. He was of the opinion that if we had to gamble with ole Khrushchev between now

Town Receives Traffic Safety Award

Mooreville Traffic-Death Free

The Town of Mooreville was presented the North Carolina State Motor Club's Traffic Safety Award for 1962. Mooreville is one of four towns within the 15-county Piedmont belt to receive the coveted recognition.

"It is a real pleasure to present Mooreville with this North Carolina State Motor Club safety award," Bullard said. "Your record through the years speaks highly of the fine cooperation of town officials, law enforcement officers and the general public. The fatality in 1962 was the first in several years and I sincerely hope it will be the last one for quite a few more years."

Welborn highly commended the Mooreville Tribune for the vital part it plays in the traffic safety effort by consistently bringing safety messages to the public's attention in a forceful and effective manner.

The Rev. Thomas Stephens Haggai of High Point spoke at a meeting of the Central Piedmont Safety Council of the North Carolina Industrial Commission, held in the War Memorial Building, the session drew some 250 industrial plant heads from the council's 10-county area.

Hosts for the meeting were the Mooreville Mills and the Cascade Weaving Company.

Mr. Haggai, who firmly believes that a courageous few can perform miracles for the betterment of our nation and mankind, built his address around the subject: "Youth Training For Safety."

Introduced by H. S. Baucum of Raleigh, safety director of the North Carolina Industrial Commission, the Rev. Mr. Haggai declared that "with today's pit—our era of perfected mass communications, one thing becomes certain: our youths of today can become potentially the greatest and strongest generation of all time—or they can become the most devastating and weakest generation of all time."

Continuing his most thought-provoking address, the speaker pointed out that the adult world of today has become known as "the tense age."

"And yes," he continued, "with our youth generation the more appropriate ID would be 'the bored age.'"

"He went on to stress the fact that there are valid reasons or explanations for 'the bored age.' Advances in educational techniques, and here again, mass communication pushes some youngsters into advancing far faster than others."

"The point, however, is that these four men had key roles in the meeting of the 10-county Central Piedmont Safety Council of the North Carolina Industrial Commission which was held here Tuesday night. Reading from left, are: S. E. Murdoch, vice president and division manager of Mooreville Mills; the Rev. Thomas S. Haggai, the speaker; H. G. Baucum, safety director of the commission; and R. Riggs Goodman, plant manager of Cascade Weaving Company.

More Renovations Set For Lowrance

Hospital Corporation Told Of Plans At Annual Meeting Monday Night

Lowrance Hospital is a healthy, growing community servant, but only through constant improvement and continued leadership can it maintain its physical and financial well-being.

In short that was the report presented this week to the Lowrance Hospital Corporation. During their annual meeting Monday night, members of the hospital ruling body heard a progress report and were told of improvement projects planned or underway.

During their business session, the corporation members voted decisively against a bylaws amendment that would have permitted doctors and their wives to serve on the corporation's board of directors.

Of the corporation's 61 members, 29 attended the yearly meeting and 13 were represented by proxy. The group voted 30-12 to kill the suggested amendment. The change was recommended by a member of the hospital medical staff during the last annual meeting. It was decided at that time to put the issue to a vote this week. The Monday night balloting followed discussion of the matter.

Doctors Charles Bittinger, John McLeland, Creighton Wrenn and L. B. Skene spoke in support of the See LOWRANCE—Page 2

Gardners Plan New Drug Store In Salisbury

John and Carlin Gardner, both of Mooreville, and J. T. Simpson and Fred Medlin, both of Statesville, will open a new drug store in Salisbury around December 1, it was learned here today.

The new drug store, to be located in a new, leased building, will be known as the Towne Pharmacy, Inc., according to the owners. The store, with approximately 4,500 square feet of floor space, is located next to the A and P Tea Company store on West Main street.

John and Carlin Gardner own and operate two drug stores in Mooreville, Goodman Drug and Medical Centre Pharmacy. Simpson is manager and part owner of a Statesville drug firm, Medical Centre Pharmacy, and Medlin, presently employed at the Medical See GARDNERS—Page 2

Rev. Thomas S. Haggai Heard By Piedmont Safety Council

Much of the responsibility in achieving an attitude of safety in our youngsters is dependent upon our first gaining a proper evaluation of these youngsters—a proper understanding of them, one of the South's favorite after-dinner speakers declared here Tuesday evening.
