Iredell County Farmers Okay 'Nickels' Plan

Iredell county farmers who purchase feed and fertilizer voted overwhelmingly last week in favor of the continuation of the "Nickels-For-Know-How" program.

A total of 475 persons voted in the county. Of this number 409 voted for the program and 66 voted against it.

A large majority of those voting in North Carolina favored the program.

This was the fifth consecutive time the program has been approved by the voters. It was set up to support research in agriculture and education with extension programs at State College. It is voted upon each three years.

Under the program an assessment of five cents per ton is made on feed and fertilizer to support various programs. More than $17 million has been raised in this manner since the program started in the 1950's.

Brooks Enlists In U. S. Army

Michael E. Brooks, 601 North Main street, Mooresville, son of Mrs. Rachel M. Deaton, of Mooresville, and Sam H. Brooks, Kannapolis, has recently enlisted in the regular United States Army.

Brooks will take his combat basic training at either Fort Jackson, South Carolina or Fort Gordon, Georgia. Upon completion of basic training, he will be trained in outside telephone plant maintenance. He will learn how to string telephone wire, install and service telephones, and signal supply procedures pertaining to telephone equipment.

Brooks is just one of many young men and women who today are taking full advantage of the training offered in the various technical fields. Experience has shown that a high school education is a necessity; however, if for some reason you had to drop out don't let that stop you from applying for one of these technical fields offered by the Army, a spokesman said.

COLLEGE DAY — Representatives of 27 universities, junior and senior colleges, 12 professional schools and the military services converged on Senior High students last week to explain what they have to offer high school graduates. The visitation was sponsored by the Senior High Student Council. This scene was typical of the discussions. Mike Piper, second from left, admissions counselor at Duke University, goes over school material with Ronald Davis, left, Frances (Bumh) Neel and Scott Suttles. The purpose of the annual college day is to interest high school students in furthering their education, and to inform them of areas of study available.

Robertson To Keynote ASCS Dinner

Joe M. Robertson, of Washington, D. C., administrative assistant secretary of agriculture, will be the keynote speaker at the annual banquet of the Iredell County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

This meeting, according to H. S. Kennedy of Statesville, Iredell county ASCS office manager, is scheduled for Wednesday, December 11, at the National Guard Armory in Statesville.

Robertson has experience in federal and state government, as well as in the field of college teaching. He is chief administrative officer for the U. S. Department of Agriculture. He directs activities of administrative management, budget and finance, hearing examinations, office of information, library, personnel, and plant and operations.

Robertson was born at Glen Dean, Ky., January 11, 1916. He was educated in the public schools of Breckinridge County, Kentucky, and at Western Kentucky State College, where he received an A. B. degree; the University of Alabama, where he received an M. A. with majors in public administration and economics; and the University of Minnesota.

Robertson is a veteran of nearly five years service in World War II, including 28 months of overseas service with the First and Third Armored Divisions and the 98th Infantry Division. During his military service he rose from private to captain and was awarded the Purple Heart and the Bronze Star.

THOUGHT FOR THIS WEEK...

REV. FLOYD TRELLE

A little girl and her brother celebrated their birthdays this week. They did not laugh or jump for joy. They cried, because their daddy is absent. He did not attend their birthday party—not now, or ever. Their daddy, John F. Kennedy is in the lap of a hole. John Jr. sit on his father's lap. He will not be able to understand why daddy doesn't answer when he calls. He cannot understand the tragedy that snuffed out his father's life. Later he will learn the sober truth recorded in history books, that John F. Kennedy was assassinated by a sniper's bullet in Dallas, Texas, on Friday, November 22, 1963.

Mrs. John Kennedy will never stand by the side of her husband again. There will be no more good-night kisses; no more precious moments together, because Friday he slumped into her lap with a hole ripped through his head.

A paralyzed father who gave a son during World War II has been called upon to give another—not in war but in peace. No one but God knows his heartbreak.

Never in all my years have I seen a day like Friday. The whole nation seemed like a man in a daze. Everyone kept shaking his head as though trying to clear away the haze. But, the horror of the nightmare will not go away—your President—my President—is dead. It is a dark, dark day. We shot the leader God gave us to follow. The madman who killed the President was grown on American soil. In a sense we produced him. As a American citizen I have many emotions throbbing in my breast—shame, anger, bewilderment, sorrow and love.

But, the overwhelming spirit in this hour is that of sorrow and love.

Our Lord, in the sermon on the Mount, said: "Blessed are they that mourn for they shall be comforted" (Matthew 5:4).

Never have I seen the world so stricken with grief. Hearts are heavy with pain and eyes are red from crying. Suddenly a nation torn with trivial differences finds itself of one heart—and suddenly we have risen above the level of Democrat and Republican, Rightist and Leftist, and middle-of-the-roader, Conservative and Liberal, Segregationist and Integrationist, Protestant and Catholic.

We have become one on a cross of common pain. The nation in this hour stands as one.

In this moment of mourning we must measure ourselves. Why must tragedy strike before we speak and act kindly? Thoughtlessly we kill our public officials over and over again with bitter words. Our open disrespect to law and authority is the breeding place for hate. It is the garden where assassins grow. Any heart of hate is a potential killer.

If we are to be blessed by our mourning we must rededicate ourselves to the ways of God: "to do justice, love kindness, and walk humbly with your God." (Micah 6:8). May our tears run deep into our souls that our mourning may work a profound change upon our lives... that our president may not have died in vain, and that we may not have vent in vain.

May Jesus Christ, the Master of us all, accept our deepest thanks for the life of this young man. We ask thy mercy upon the human race for such a terrible crime. We pray thy matchless peace upon the wife and children of the deceased. Comfort all the loved ones. Be with the new President, Lyndon Johnson, and the nation he leads.

O God, have mercy upon the soul of the man who took President's life. May he face his crime and seek forgiveness. O, Christ, who said, "Suffer the little child to come unto me, and take the fatherless children upon thy knee and place thy hand upon them."
