Local Minister On Conference Tour

The Rev. Powell Wilkins, pastor of Jones Memorial Methodist Church, is among 15 clergymen of the Western North Carolina Methodist Conference who are making a three-day tour this week of church-related institutions within the conference.

The tour began Tuesday morning. It is the third annual orientation tour of the conference's commission on town and country work. The tour will include visits to four colleges, to both the Children's Home and Methodist Home for the Aging, as well as to Hugh Chatham Hospital in Elkin and to the offices and printing plant of the North Carolina Christian Advocate.

The Rev. Garland Stafford of Statesville, executive secretary of the commission on town and country work; and the Rev. Everett Lowman of Charlotte, chairman of the commission, were in charge of arrangements for the tour.

The ministers met at the Methodist Building in Statesville Tuesday morning for a briefing session and lunch. The trip began from there shortly after noon.

Letters to the Editor...

U.S. MAIL

(Editor's Note: The ladies who prepared the following account are officers in the Mooresville Senior Citizens Club. One of them, Mrs. P. D. Lipe, is president of the state Senior Citizens Association.)

Dear Mr. Editor:

We wish some space in your paper to bring to the attention of the elderly and retired Senior Citizens of Mooresville an organization that could and should do much to bring recreation and happiness to many of our older citizens. The organization is known as the Mooresville Senior Citizens Club.

First, let us say it is far from a local organization, but is part of a National group, recognized and sanctioned by both State and National Governments. It is fast becoming one of the largest and most active groups in the Nation. The over-65 groups now number nearly seventeen million and by 1970 will be twenty million. It has been recognized by people in authority that this huge segment of our population could not be relegated to the rocking chair or turned out to pasture, and with work rules as they are and physical conditions playing a large part with this group, something must be done to relieve and furnish some form of entertainment to break the long, lonesome days of so many people.

The recreation leaders of our country came up with a wonderful plan to organize our elderly folks into clubs where they could get together with congenial people with various activities. The activities vary in different areas, some paint, some work in ceramics, some dance, play cards and numerous other games. Most of the clubs are sponsored by some of the other organizations of a city and are under the supervision of the Recreation Department of the city.

The State of North Carolina is well organized and is considered one of the foremost states in the nation in caring for its elderly ed by a special committee of nine from the recreation workers in the state. Miss Mae Crandall is chairman of this committee and our own Mr. Baber is a member.

These state officers and members of the special committee meet several times during the year to make plans for the convention. We have an afternoon meeting on the opening day with a keynote speaker, a business meeting where officers for the coming year are elected, and at 7 o'clock the highlight of the convention, the banquet, where another well-known speaker is present.

The second morning is given over to the discussion of business, the voting of the entire group on the new slate of officers, a brief memorial service, and usually some entertainment by the host city. It is a very enjoyable occasion and is eagerly looked forward to from year to year.

Now a few words about our own Mooresville Club. This club was organized eleven years ago and sponsored by the Mooresville Woman's Club. The membership has never been large, (we now have about 40 members) but it is a wide-awake, enthusiastic group. We meet each Wednesday at the War Memorial Building from 10 a. m. until 3 p. m. We have various games including Bingo, Canasta, and Rook, with most of the men playing set-back. We also help in any way we can when there is need, such as folding boxes for a barbecue.

At eleven thirty, we gather in the Pine Room for a period of Devotions and business. Usually, we have a local minister to hold the devotions and we want to thank them for their support and the good messages they bring us. At the close of the meeting about 12:30 we all go to the Green Room for a sumptuous meal to which our visiting minister and his wife are always cordially invited.

Three ladies are assigned kitchen duty each week and are ably assisted by others. The meal is no burden on anyone as the menus are made on Wednesday for the following week and most of the food is prepared at home. This weekly planning assures us of a good well-balanced meal.

There are no set dues in the Mooresville Senior Citizens Club. There is a collection of ten cents taken each month to pay for cards and flowers for the sick members.

We also celebrate birthdays every two months when each member makes a voluntary contribution to our Pleasure Fund. This takes care of a trip in the summer to some interesting place for a picnic. Last year we went to Chimney Rock and this year we had a wonderful day at Tanglewood Park.

Along with our pleasure and recreation, we try to help those who are in unfortunate circumstances and each year at Thanksgiving and Christmas we collect food, clothing, and money for some needy family, working with Mrs. Cook of the Christian Mission.

We feel, in fact we know, there are many people in Mooresville who should get into this wonderful organization. They could be of so much help to us and we hope to them. So everyone over 50 come and visit with us at least and see what we are doing and we know in a few weeks you would be bringing your covered dish and meeting with us regularly.

Sincerely,
Mrs. W. L. Hobbs, President
Mr. P. D. Lipe, Vice President
Mrs. D. A. Brackett, Secretary
Mrs. T. E. Ervin, Treasurer

South Piedmont Teachers Argue Value Of 'Original Research'

Meeting in Charlotte Thursday, teachers from 32 South Piedmont school districts talked about science fairs and got hung up on the concept of "original research."

Representing 14 counties in the South Piedmont Science Fair region, they keyed their discussion to a remark by Atomic Energy Commission scientist Dr. Burrell Wood.

Wood, who as a professor at Furman University helped establish the S.C. State Science Fair, told the teachers meeting at Charlotte College that "science fairs are designed to aid educational programs.

"Some people feel we should only consider projects showing original research, but this notion is divorced from reality."

Entries at the 1964 South Piedmont Science Fair, which is scheduled for March 21 at the Charlotte Merchandise Mart, will—as in past years—be judged heavily on "originality in plan and execution."

Charlotte's Garinger High biology teacher Donn Dieter noted that "originality is a difficult thing to determine."

Dr. John Yarborough, a Meredith College professor, thought this meant the project simply should be new to the student.

Some teachers felt that past science fairs had placed too much emphasis on high-powered research from the most brilliant students and on the "showmanlike aspect" of displays.

Most all agreed that making entries in local school science fairs mandatory reduced the quality of the projects, but they admitted that some talented students only gte interested after being forced into them.

C. M. Thaler of Ashley High, in Gastonia, thought that science projects required in the classroom and those to be entered in fairs were "two different things in terms of quality" and that tying them together was unrealistic.

Dr. Barry Hounshell, director of science and mathematics for the Charlotte - Mecklenburg schools, agreed for a different reason. He thought that projects required as regular classroom work should not be fraught with the "competitiveness" of science fairs.

Mrs. Clare Grissett of West Rowan High and Bruce Robertson, chemistry teacher at Myers Park High in Charlotte, agreed that classroom projects should be designed first for "the sake of investigation and experience," with only the best of these being encouraged for fair entry.

The teachers carried their debate on to dinner at the Charlotte College student union and to a summary session afterward, where National Science Fair Director Joseph Kraus raised a new point.

Kraus said that a survey of nearly 2,500 national fair contestants over 15 years showed that most of them first became avidly interested in science at 10 to 12 years of age. "We encourage fairs right on down into elementary school," he said.

The 1964 South Piedmont fair is sponsored by The Charlotte Observer and by business and civic organizations in the region.

3 Iredell 4-H'ers, 2 Adult Leaders Named State Winners

Three Iredell county 4-H'ers and two adult leaders from the county have been named State 4-H winners for 1963, according to Lyman Dixon, acting 4-H state leader.

The most state winners any other county had was two, therefore, Iredell county 4-Hers, leaders, and sponsors are justly proud of the county's showing.

Iredell county winners are: Anne Cooke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Cooke of Cleveland, route 2, citizenship; Elizabeth Cooke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Cooke of Cleveland, route 2, home improvement; Howard Williams, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Williams of Olin, route 1, dairy; and Mrs. C. W. Watts of Statesville, route 8, and Avery Sloop of Mount Ulla, route 1, outstanding adult leaders from North Carolina.

Their records have been sent to Chicago where they will be judged for national honors and Dixon says he expects North Carolina to be in the spotlight when the national winners are named.

As state winners, all of the Iredell winners will go to Chicago for the national meeting with the exception of Anne Cooke, and she will go if she is picked as a national winner.

Anne Cooke has taken citizenship as her main project for seven years. She has completed 50 projects with the main emphasis on citizenship. As a result of completing 287 citizenship activities, she was state winner in the N. C. Tercentenary Essay Contest; a delegate to Girl Scout Girls State where she was elected secretary of the National Party; and received the good citizenship award at Troutman High School where she is a senior this year. She has already been tapped into the state 4-H Honor Club and plans to enter State College where she will major in food science and processing.

Elizabeth Cooke has made 175 home improvements in the family home. She also believes in helping others and has made 19 home improvement exhibits. She made a survey on proper lighting in her community and this resulted in 17 improvements being made. She also conducted two lamp-making workshops and a better lighting campaign.

Elizabeth has also been a state winner in the fruit and vegetable marketing demonstration contest and received the American Junior Jersey Breeders junior 4-H'ers with demonstrations, exhibits, record books and speeches. Her trip to Chicago to attend National 4-H Club Congress is sponsored by the Sperry-Hutchinson Company.

Howard Williams, who won state honors in the field of dairying, is an old hand in this field. He has consistently won honors in this department for several years on the county level. He has accumulated a vast amount of knowledge about the dairy production.

Last year he was a member of the North Carolina dairy judging team, which placed fourth in the nation, and he also placed fourth in the nation on an individual basis. He placed as the top judge in judging Ayrshires. He has completed 15 calf, two dairy production and three dairy management projects. He will also receive a trip to National 4-H Club Congress, sponsored by Oliver Corporation.

Sloop, leader of Mazeppa Community 4-H Club, enjoys his work with the 4-H members of Iredell County and, as a result, he was named the outstanding adult leader in the state among the men. The state 4-H Development Fund will sponsor his trip to National Club Congress as a partial reward for his services to the young people.

He has assisted 36 club members with demonstrations; helped secure loans to purchase calves for members; gave assistance to 56 club members at county demonstration day; accompanied club members on a trip to Michigan; helped 214 youngsters with their record books; held demonstration workshops and helped with several other 4-H programs.

Mrs. Watts has helped 4-H'ers for 18 years. She led her Wilkesboro Road 4-H Community Club to the county championship for three years. Her club has received the state safety award for three years and state health award for two years.

QUESTION BOX

What Do You Mean By Infallibility Of The Pope?

It doesn't mean that he is inspired, cannot make mistakes, or teach new doctrine.

It does mean that, when in his official capacity he proclaims a teaching about religion to be binding the whole church, he is kept from error. This doesn't include his many speeches and letters. Rather, it refers to an official declaration wherein he states this specific teaching to be free from error.

"Behold I am with you all days" are words of Christ to the Apostles guarantying success in teaching and prevention from leading world astray by false teaching.
