Building A Bridge To Better Understanding

Biracial Committee, Good Neighbor Council, Human Relations Commission — call it what you will, it's a good idea under the circumstances.

Under the circumstances, not just here in Mooresville, but in the United States of America. As much as we would like to be, we are no more protected from the winds that carry racial strife than we are isolated from the viruses that cause the common cold. To paraphrase a time-worn phrase, no community is an island unto itself.

That this town's leadership is aware of the social revolution about us was evidenced by the Town Board last week. The commissioners threw their full support behind Mayor John C. Miller's suggestion that he establish a study group made up of ministers of both races. Such a group, which Miller aptly termed "a bridge to understanding," was requested formally last month by a delegation representing the South Iredell Citizens League, a Negro organization. There was absolutely no hint of coercion, no threats, no demands, there was a request, nothing more.

Mayor Miller feels, and we agree, there is a definite place for a biracial committee in Mooresville. This place is implied in the suggested name of the group—Good Neighbor Council. The 17 per cent of Mooresville's population that is Negro has problems, just as the remaining 83 per cent does. Neither bloc can appreciate the other's difficulties until they are mutual understood. Answers, solutions, such as they may be, can come only from a community atmosphere of reason and restraint and from a willingness by all concerned to recognize our social situation as it exists.

We can't conceive of any harm our Good Neighbor Council can do. It will be a mayor-appointed body without legislative, judicial or executive powers of any kind. It can examine, it can suggest, it can make no change of its own volition. So, at the very worst, it will do nothing.

At its best, as Commissioner Joe Knox put it, the council can concentrate the community's efforts toward continued amicable relationships between the races, primarily by establishing channels of communication. Knox points out this is much better than branching our efforts out in a thousand different directions, each effort unaware of what the others are doing.

Our soon-to-be Good Neighbor Council can do this. We believe it will.

Give The Friend Of The Blind A Boost

What is more precious, short of life itself, than eyesight?

We would do well to ask ourselves this question now, on the eve of the White Cane Drive that begins Sunday, September 15, here in Mooresville and across the state. When we think of the value we place in the sense of sight, and when we are told that 50 per cent of blindness can be prevented, we should connect the two.

The Mooresville Lions Club will be calling upon each of us to join them in their never-ending fight against needless blindness. The mayor has proclaimed September "Sight-Saving Month" in Mooresville. He has called on the town to join the Lions in efforts to "conserve the vital resource of good vision by learning the habits of good eye care, and by supporting research that will help all men enjoy the blessing of healthy eyesight."

"Sight-Saving Month" is a cooperative promotion by the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness, the N. C. Association for the Blind, the N. C. Commission for the Blind and Tar Heel Lions Clubs. J. W. Scott will direct the White Cane Drive in Mooresville. The actual White Cane appeal is the one and only means of supporting the work of the N. C. Association for the Blind, a Lions organized and operated concern.

On Saturday, September 21, Bill Griffith will head up the familiar bangle sale, which is a part of the overall White Cane Drive. We will have plenty of opportunity to contribute to this worthy cause.

Too many of us take sight for granted. We don't stop to realize that every year 31,000 persons become blind—victims of disease, accident or neglect—and fully half of these tragedies could be prevented.

The Lions have earned the title of "Friend of the Blind and Visually Handicapped." Let's show we believe in their cause.

Parson Jones' Pulpit

DEAR MR. PUBLISHER:

Our women shore had a good program the other night. We ate and we talked—I don't know which one was best. Ellie Nicklesinger had fixed some chocolate-covered greenbeans, which was out-of-this-world. She also had what she called "sour cake."

I told the madam it was getting hard to tell one end of a meal from the other, the way they're mixing the sour with the sweet. My younguns are just itching for some sugar-coated spinish. Just about everything's sugar-coated these days. (Even preaching.)

I reckon if you boiled our talk down into a subject it would be the "Supreme Court's decision on prayer." (Course you'd have to do a site a boiling to get it down that fine.) Ellie Nicklesinger started the discussion by lambasting the Supreme Court. She vowed (kinda strongly) that this group a lawyers were leading us down the road to heathenism. She said it was terrible that the pore little school children couldn't have prayer in the classroom.

Rufe's wife said she didn't know what kind of adults our younguns were gonna grow into without mixing a little prayer with their education. Hezekiah's madam pointed out that the sad thing about the whole mess was the little school children that didn't go to Church. Now they wouldn't hear no praying atall.

Now Mr. Publisher, all this talking about prayer sounded awful impressive. I think they coulda converted the Supreme Court, but they didn't convince me. You see, I knew all these ladies and I know what goes on in their houses. All their pious talk about the importance of prayer was just so-much hot air. Oh, I ain't denying the importance of prayer—I'm just skepital about their sincerety.

None a these ladies have family prayer at home. If its so important why don't they practice a little of it? It looks to me like thats an awfull good place to pray—and the Supreme Court can't do nothing about it. Another thing, we had to give up prayer meeting last year for a very good reason. Namely that nobody attended. And I didn't hear all this hell-raising when we cut out the prayer meeting. I wonder why?

Long as I'm riled up I might as well bring up another thing. Ole Hezekiah's wife spoke about all these kids that don't attend Church. Well sir, I've been trying to get her to go calling on some a these folks for two years now but she ain't made the first visit. I suppose she expects the schools to do her job for her. Now that the Supreme Court has took her excuse away she's really squirming.

I reckon now that the government has decided to get outa the missionary work the Church is gonna have to shake itself loose from the rocking chair and go to work. Maybe someday soon the Church will be known for its sweat rather than its chicken suppers.

Well, I've gotta go now. The madam wants me to go to the drug store and get her some make-up. She won't leave the house without her "face."

See you later!

Yours Truly,
Parson Jones

THOUGHT FOR THIS WEEK...

—BY—
REV. FLOYD TREXLER

There's a little bit of the Pharisee in every Denomination. We are so busy telling everybody we're right that we don't take time to listen to each other. We're too much mouth and not enough ears! I am convinced that no denomination has "the whole truth and nothing but the truth."

It's high time for Christians everywhere to sit down and listen to one another, for all have a truth to share. The Roman Catholics have Scriptural background for the authority of a Pope. The Presbyterians have Biblical reason for the doctrine of predestination. The Christian Scientists are not completely off base about divine healing. The Episcopalians might learn something from the Holiness groups. The Church of God might pick up a few new insights from the Lutherans. Most protestant groups could learn a great deal from the Jehovah's Witnesses about evangelism.

If for one, am ready to sit down and discuss our differences in the light of Holy Scripture. This need not compromise our fundamental faith in the Saviourhood and Lordship of Jesus Christ. If we are afraid to express our faith to opposition, then our convictions must be awfully puny. When we as denominations begin to "crow" about being "the way" to Heaven, we had better listen to the words of Christ again: "I am the way, the truth, and the life: No man cometh unto the Father, but by me." (John 14:6)

CINDY JACOBS AND MARY WALTON

School is underway and the old building is hopping again. Most things around M.J.H.S. are getting settled down now. Mrs. DeVane has her office workers in line, Miss Honeycutt has her library assistants working hard, and the student store's business is booming.

Our Student Council representatives will be elected this week and we will conduct our first Student Council meeting the following week.

The Tribune question for this week is: What are your aims this year in school?

To bring up my grades — Betty Jo Harrington.

To break a lot of bad habits — Thad McDonald.

To work the best of my ability in every subject — Barry Brawley.

To learn how to spell — Clarence Black.

Pass history and make it to the ninth grade — Elaine Barkley.

To study harder and meet new people (boys) — M. L. M.

To have good grades and to pass for the year — Ricky White.

To make good grades and stay away from Mr. Smawley's "paddle" — D. S.

To be a good student and to make the best grades that I possibly can — Jane Church.

To stay in the Beta Club and also try to fulfill my duties as president of the Student Council — Dale Talbert.

To study as long as I am here — Mike W.

To remember my English papers for Mrs. Miller's class — Patsy Miller.

Make friends with the teachers, or else — Douglas Piquerra.

To get in the Beta Club — Jewel Johnston.

To pass N. C. History —Sylvia Benfield.

To hook me a "beau" — "Babo."

To be a good student — Jessie Howard.

To make A's on my grades — Gail Griffith.

To get out of here —Franklin Rader.

To achieve a higher goal — Jane Kelly.

To be a good saxophone player—Vickie Morrow.

To make A's and pass the seventh grade — Rickey Weisner.

To get out of the eighth — Donnie Brooks.

To make the best of it — Ronald McGee.

To pass biology — Bobby Mills.

To be the best teacher I know how to be — Cora Freeze.

Grady Karriker Serving On Aircraft Carrier

Grady L. Karriker, machinist's mate first class, USN, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ortis L. Karriker of route 3, Mooresville, is serving aboard the attack aircraft carrier USS Bon Homme Richard, a Pacific Fleet unit which recently completed a four-month overhaul period at the Puget Sound Naval Shipyard, Bremerton, Wash.

The 43,000-ton carrier arrived in San Diego, Calif., her normal operational port, on July 30 after undergoing a seven-million dollar "facelift."

Your Friends May Be Gunning For You

No sooner do we stow our water skis than we start cleaning our guns. This fall and winter, we will be taking to the woods in search of objects to shoot. We will prefer certain types of animals, but our record shows we won't be too particular.

Millions of Americans will sally forth in quest of everything from rabbits (no sticks or stones, please) to Canadian moose. Iredell men and women will do their share of hunting—and some of us may be among those estimated 200 hunters who will return from the hill feet first.

A friend of ours, an avid hunter, once had this experience: He invited a friend for a rabbit hunt. The friend had no experience whatever with guns or hunting. Since there seems to be some sort of masculine pride attached to guns, the friend admitted he knew nothing about hunting, but he didn't let on about being unfamiliar with weapons. As the pair roamed meadow and farm, the novice stayed close on the heels of his partner, with the gun pointed straight ahead. He didn't shoot at anything, but having a 12-gauge shotgun breathing down your neck all day is unnerving.

When they called it a day, called in the dogs and were heading back to the car, our friend's friend asked "how do you get this little thing to go back where it was?"

It developed that the fellow, new to the game, had done the only thing he knew about guns when they heard the first yelp of the dogs—he had cocked his shotgun. Since they didn't get a shot that first time, he simply left his gun cocked until the next opportunity came along. He figured once it was cocked, there was nothing to do but shoot, and besides, he didn't know what else to do with the darn thing.

We repeat, having a 12-gauge shotgun pointed at the back of your head for six hours is not exactly comfortable, but learning that the shotgun is cocked is enough to make strong men quake—and that's what our friend did.

Our friend lived to tell the tale. Some of us won't.

Back of almost every hunting accident is one cause, carelessness. Some basic pointers may help you both to return unwounded from your hunting trip and to avoid bagging a fellow hunter.

Know what you're firing at before you pull the trigger. Be certain that the rustle in the brush actually is a deer and not another hunter.

Never climb through or over a fence with a loaded gun. Unload the gun, then reload after you've crossed.

Don't shoot at a flat, hard surface. Ricochetting bullets can kill or wound at long distances.

Never look down the barrel of a gun to see whether it's loaded. You can't tell by looking down the barrel anyway, and there's always the chance of an accident.

Always carry a gun so that you control the direction of the muzzle even if you stumble. Keep the safety on until you're ready to shoot.

Keep guns away from children. Never leave a weapon unattended without first unloading it. Store guns and ammunition safely out of reach of children.

Unload guns carried into camp or home. Keep guns cased until reaching the hunting area. Always be sure the barrel is clear of obstructions, such as mud or snow.

Alcohol and guns definitely don't mix. Avoid drinking while you're carrying a loaded gun.

Above all, treat a gun with respect. Never point it at a human; it might go off.

Mooresville now numbers among its civic organizations the recently-organized Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks—otherwise known as the Elk's Lodge.

The organization came into existence recently in installation ceremonies held at the Charlotte Elk's Lodge, when 44 men were formally installed as charter members.

An additional 19 members will be initiated in ceremonies held at the Legion Hut tonight (Thursday), boosting the Elk's Lodge's total membership to 63 persons. The Statesville Elk's Lodge is the sponsoring organization.

Following are the charter members already installed: Tom Delk, J. E. "Bub" McKnight, Joe Mills, W. B. McPherson, W. H. Spencer, Jr., John Amburn, H. T. Ashcraft, B. W. Barger, Jr., Henry Barkeley, John D. Beam, Grant Bolmer, William Branch, Dr. Boyce Brawley, William K. Brawley, Paul Brawley, Barry Caldwell, R. W. Cavin, E. C. Cavin, H. W. Compton, Paul Corriher, A. Charles DeVane, A. F. Gabriel, William J. Germann, Dr. A. M. Henderson, R. J. Holshouser, Ned Honeycutt, L. T. Horton, James Houston, Robert Howard, W. H. Keeter, Phillip Mack, Buren B. Mayhew, H. T. Mayhew, R. C. Millsaps, Ralph Millsaps, Jr., Harvey Millsaps, Robert W. Moore, George McKnight, W. M. Norman, Jr., Dr. W. W. Painter, W. W. Rader, Paul Steadman, George Stevens, and John J. White.

The State Highway Department last Friday announced final determination of the route of the Mooresville-Charlotte highway, bypassing Davidson, Cornelius, Huntersville and Croft on the west and costing in the neighborhood of one million dollars.

The new route will take the place of the present U. S. 21 north, known as the Statesville-Charlotte road. This old road passes through the four north Mecklenburg towns and is badly overloaded with traffic.

Effective July 1, a hydrant charge will be made for all buildings outside the town's limits which are within 1,000 feet, by road, of a fire hydrant, it was announced today by City Manager Robert H. Peck. This charge is in compliance with an ordinance passed by the Board of Town Commissioners at its May meeting.

M. O. Stiles, well-known Mooresville resident, and assistant pharmacist at Miller Drug Company for the past 23 years, has resigned his position and will shortly leave for Florida, according to an announcement made this week by S. H. Price, owner of Miller Drug Company.

Mr. Stiles joined Miller's in 1930, going there from Goodman's Drug Company. In announcing Mr. Stiles' resignation, Mr. Price spoke highly of his ability, and stated that their relationship had always been a pleasant one.

Mr. Stiles, his mother and sister, will go to Florida where his sister will join her husband, Woody Wismer, aviation instructor there.

Miss Phyllis Greenhill, a sophomore at Greensboro College, visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. G. Greenhill, during the Thanksgiving holidays.

Bill Brown, a student at Appalachian State Teachers College at Boone, spent the Thanksgiving holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Worth J. Brown, at their home on East Catawba avenue.

Miss Natalie Johnston, a sophomore at WCUNC at Greensboro, spent the Thanksgiving holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. N. (Dick) Johnston, Jr., at their home on West Center avenue.

Dr. Ernest L. Mackie of the University of North Carolina announced Monday that Wayne Thompson had been elected to membership in Phi Beta Kappa. He will be initiated on December 8.

Phi Beta Kappa is the highest academic honor that can be bestowed by a university to an under-graduate student.

A senior at the University, Wayne is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe D. Thompson of Mooresville.

Monroe Seigler Gabriel, aged 59 years, well known Mooresville grocery man, died in the Lowrance Hospital in Mooresville last Thursday night about 7 o'clock. Suffering from a stomach ailment for a number of years, Mr. Gabriel underwent hospital treatment last April and an operation several days prior to his death.

Electric Cooking never Soot-Blackens Pots and Pans... Or Walls Either!

Of all the exciting advantages flameless cooking has to offer, the one many housewives like most is cleanliness.

With electricity there's no combustion, and thus no soot or greasy grime. Your pots and pans stay cleaner meal after meal, month after month.

And electricity doesn't produce dust or smoke to gather on walls or ceilings.

The space behind an electric range is easier to get at to clean. You just unplug, and pull the range from the wall.

See the beautiful, high-speed electric ranges, with all their time- and work-saving features, on display at your favorite electric appliance dealer's... or at any Duke Power showroom now.
