Burlington Foundation Gives $440,000 In Educational Aid

Burlington Industries Foundation contributed nearly $440,000 to the cause of higher education during the 1962-63 school year, Charles F. Myers, Jr., president of Burlington Industries, announced yesterday.

The textile firm's aid to education program, administered by the Foundation, gave financial assistance during the year to nearly 300 colleges and universities located in 35 states. Also benefiting were 50 secondary and preparatory schools and 17 of the various educational state associations and foundations.

More than one-fourth of the funds went as direct aid to 355 students, including those who received Burlington scholarships or educational loans which the Foundation makes available to employees or their children.

Included in Burlington's contributions during the year was $65,000 used to match funds donated to colleges and universities by 326 company employees and directors. This phase of the program benefited 171 schools.

The Foundation has channeled nearly $4.5 million into the field of education since it was established in 1943 by Burlington to develop a broad education program.

The Burlington Aid to Education Program includes direct grants to educational institutions and to associations, scholarship and fellowship awards to students selected by the institutions, educational loans for Burlington employees or their children, and professional tuition fees and scholarship awards are matched dollar-for-dollar through unrestricted grants to the schools involved, as are employee donations.

SHUCKS and NUBBINS

BY LEN SULLIVAN

A Reader Has Her Say On Bringing Up Kids

What follows is a letter to the editor. The reason we reproduce it here should be obvious by the time you finish the first paragraph.

Dear Sir:

Never before have I taken pen in hand to express my views this way. But I feel I must take issue with an item in your Shucks and Nubbins column last week. You dealt with what you called a "confusion of regimentation and civilization." Your point was, I take it, that we parents are planning too many activities for our children; that to develop their personalities kids should be left to find their fun and upbringing wherever they can.

I submit the article confuses parenthood with the industrial revolution, or something. Further suggest that the current behavior pattern of our children are the direct results of advances in science, agriculture and all the rest. Two generations ago, boys and girls were put to work by the time they could lift a hoe and dry a dish. They worked side by side with their parents, so naturally members of a family saw a good deal of each other. But, even then their time was not their own. With only a few free hours on Sundays, they hardly had time to get bored. Sure, they enjoyed improvised games, because those were the only kind of games they knew anything about.

What about today? Kids don't work, so how are they to ever know the meaning of the word discipline. I am concerned, as I'm sure most parents are, about our children's lack of direction. I agree they are aimless, but it's because nobody is around to orient them. To challenge them, to give them purpose. So we get them into clubs and all that so they can learn that games have rules, just as life does, and that you can't just whittle through life, making nothing.

I have three beautiful, wonderful children. They see their father at breakfast usually, and at supper occasionally. What they do with their father mostly is watch him drive away. All three had to wear short pants to the football game last week, because nobody was home to spare half an hour to get them outfitted in winter clothes.

Let me tell you something, and you listen good. You are the world's finest example of absentee parenthood. If you would spend a little time making slingshots and doing all those things you wrote about with our sons, maybe they wouldn't be robots who just sit and stare at the T.V.

Angryly,
Mrs. Len Sullivan

P.S. I wouldn't mind seeing a little more of you myself.

L. G. Hardwick Laid To Rest Monday At 4

Lawrence Glenn Hardwick, 54-year-old resident of Mooresville, route 1, died in the Chatham Memorial Hospital in Elkin at 5:45 p. m. Saturday.

Born in Cabarrus county on December 9, 1909, Mr. Hardwick was a son of Mrs. Lillie Bradley Hardwick Wiley of Mooresville and the late Luther Hardwick.

At the time of his death, Mr. Hardwick was employed as a crane operator by the Buffalo Tank Company of Charlotte.

Surviving in addition to the mother, are the widow, Mrs. Hester Martin Hardwick; two sons, Lawrence Glenn Hardwick, Jr. and James D. Hardwick, both of Mooresville, route 1; two daughters, Mrs. Claude Williams of Elkin and Mrs. Thomas Isenhour of Scottsville, Virginia; and two brothers, Larry Hardwick of Mooresville and Robert H. Hardwick of Phoenix, Ariz. Nineteen grandchildren also survive.

Funeral services for Mr. Hardwick were conducted at 4 p. m. Monday at the Southern Baptist Church, with the pastor, the Rev. P. C. Gantt, in charge. Burial was in Glenwood Memorial Park cemetery.

October 16 Babies May Have Last Laugh

One of the eternal questions: What is the ideal age for a child to begin his formal education? The debate comes to a head at the start of every school year, because babies are forever being born in October, November and December. Recently, the question for our little weekly feature was, are any changes in the school-age law needed. One lady had a solid suggestion that entrance examinations, rather than age, be the determining factor. But what struck us was that everybody we asked had a strong opinion on the subject.

Educators nationally are attempting to toughen the first grade curriculum. One of the first suggested steps toward this is raise the entrance age requirements. Over the past several years, several states have been adding a month or two to their minimum-age law. School teachers and administrators generally agree that age works in favor of the child. A couple of months can make a great difference in the child's willingness to buckle down to work. There are fewer failures among children who are well into their sixth year when they begin school.

Parents seem to feel the sooner education is started the better. This view is not shared by teachers. This may be some small comfort to the parents of all those October 16 babies.

In An Instant, From Cossack To Flapper

A good time was had by all—

At the "hat sale" put on by the women of Jones Memorial Methodist Church, there is a built-in something in every woman that enables her to change her mood as she changes hats. The hat sale in the church fellowship hall Friday and Saturday did more for the morale of Mooresville hat fanatics (and what woman isn't?) than a battalion of psychiatrists. The hats, and the women who wore them, too, the fun was watching the girls as they flitted from table to table, giggling and squealing as the hats flitted from head to head. In a second, a housewife would become a Cossack in one of those tall, round, furry headpieces; the next instant she might grace about as a flapper from the Roaring Twenties, her crowning glory crowned by one of those chamber pots with sun visors. All in all, it was a refreshing way to handle a fund-raising project.

Cleaning The Grist From The Mill

Humm... in a piece on graduates who have served as president of the North Carolina Junior Chamber of Commerce, The Alumni Review (of UNC) says "this dynasty began when N. C. J. graduates elected Bob Cox as their 1956-57 president." We are left to assume Bob has put on quite a bit of weight since his Chapel Hill football and haberdashery days.

Back in the summer, lightning-ran in on Ray and Martha Nesbitt's freezer while the family was away. By time they got home, the supply of meat was ripe indeed. For weeks, Martha has tried to get the odor out of the freezer, and now, finally, she has. She wanted us to pass along to all housewives who might have her problem that sliced oranges placed about in the freezer will do away with the smell completely. She didn't say what to do when everything from the freezer tastes like oranges.

Our youngest, who is becoming acutely aware of the world about him, noticed the full moon the other night. "Look, mommy," he yelled, "the moon is whole."
