Three candidates are seeking the office of Lieutenant-Governor in the Democratic primary in May. We want to discuss them in the order in which they announced their candidacy.

John Jordan, long-time state senator from Raleigh and Wake county, was the first to formally announce. He did it in a manner characteristic of the way he approaches the affairs of state. He announced that he would conduct a "give them Hell" campaign. Jordan, in our opinion, is by far the least qualified of the three men seeking this post. It is also our belief that he will finish far down at the bottom when the votes are counted.

Jordan, it seems to us, is the perennial champion of a great deal of odd-ball and screw-ball bills in the state senate. A long-time member of the General Assembly remarked to us yesterday that "if all the legislation John Jordan has supported or introduced in Raleigh had been passed, North Carolina wouldn't know which end was up."

He has, for instance, fought a great deal of the legislation recommended by George Randall to improve our state prison system. In the last General Assembly, for example, he backed a bill that would have required the prison cannery to stop selling its products to other state institutions supported by taxes. The bill didn't get anywhere, but had it passed it would have crippled a part of Randall's rehabilitation program for prisoners.

We certainly would assume that Randall hopes Jordan does not win, basing it on fear for what might happen to one of the best state prison systems in America should he be elected.

Frankly, we would rather see the office remain vacant as it is filled by John Jordan of Raleigh.

Robert Scott was the second candidate to announce. Bob made a two-month tour of the state in an effort to line up support to seek the Governor's office. When he found he was too late with too little, he announced his candidacy for Lieutenant Governor.

Bob, son of the late Kerr Scott, is an able and personable guy with some built-in support from the rural areas. But the people of North Carolina will not buy his stop-gap approach to this office. His residence, Haw River, is close enough to the center of the state for him to run for Governor either from the west or the east, and Bob will run for Governor in 1968.

If we are still around, we might support Bob for Governor in 1968, but we can't go along with his motive in running for Lieutenant Governor. This office is important because the Lieutenant Governor presides over the senate and names all the senate committees, in short practically controls the senate. It is far too important a responsibility to be held by a candidate who is merely using it as a means to keep his name before the public until it is time to run for Governor. We can't buy Bob's stepping-stone approach, don't believe the people of North Carolina will buy it.

This brings us to H. Clifford Blue, last candidate to announce, and in all probability the next Lieutenant Governor of North Carolina.

Known and beloved as "Cliff" from Murphy to Manteo, he deserves to win this race, will probably do so going away in the first primary.

For more years than we can remember, Cliff has been the publisher of the weekly Sandhill Citizen at Abbeville in Moore county. Doubtless God could make a better country editor than Cliff, but doubtless He never has.

Quiet, self-effacing, modest, humble, he has served all the people of North Carolina for 18 consecutive years in the General Assembly, was Speaker of the House in the last term.

Cliff has, through the years in Raleigh, fought vigorously against what he thought was bad legislation, and fought just as hard for legislation he believed was good for the people of North Carolina. But these battles have been characterized by a high note of decency, fairness, even kindness. Cliff has that happy ability and talent for disagreeing with his fellowman upon occasion without becoming disagreeable about it. Despite his 18 years in the General Assembly, and despite the fact he has always spoken his piece for or against an issue, it is said of him that he has no enemies, only admirers, among North Carolina lawmakers during the past two decades.

His 18 years in the General Assembly have given him a working knowledge of state government acquired by few, and a keen perception into what legislation will work for good or bad for the state he loves. The qualifications he has for the Lieutenant Governor's office have been possessed by few men within our memory.

Being the able and noble sort of man that he is, we CHAFF—Page 2

$205,300 In Construction Work Okayed

Activity in the construction field was brisk in Mooreville during the first month of 1964.

Records on file in the office of Cy Brooks, city manager, reveal that 10 permits, calling for an expenditure of $205,300, were granted during the 31-day period which ended last Friday.

This compares with eight permits, calling for an outlay of $45,184.77, issued during the same month last year.

Permits granted during the past month were as follows:

Clyde L. Howell, 408 East Mills avenue, addition to washeteria, $2,000.

James Caldwell, Sr., 629 Ashe street, addition to dwelling, $50.

W. F. Morrow, 156 North Broad street, addition to washeteria, $2,000.

NASA's Lewis Will Speak To Clubs, Guests

Mooreville native Johnny Lewis, an official of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, will be in charge of a special program here Thursday, February 20.

Lewis will be principal speaker during a joint meeting of the local Rotary Club and Kiwanis Club at the War Memorial. The program, offered through the cooperation of NASA, was arranged by Kiwanian Ed Kipka.

The civic clubs have invited science teachers and students to attend the meeting. Members of the clubs will meet together at 6:30 p.m. for supper, with the special program to get underway at 7 o'clock.

Lewis will show a film and discuss his part in the nation's space exploration program.

A grandson of Mrs. E. W. Perry of 380 North Broad Street, Lewis, 30, is a graduate of Mooreville High School and Catawba College. He joined NASA about five years ago, and since then has worked closely with the man-in-space project, and he has been connected with all phases of this nation's space exploration program.

Lewis lives in Tabb, Va., a Norfolk suburb, with his wife, the former Betty Barnhardt, also of Mooreville. He spends much of his time working at the space center in Florida, Texas and California.

The NASA officer will show a film illustrating the infinitely delicate and complicated equipment used in space exploration.

Uncle Dan From Doolie Says:

DEAR MISTER EDITOR:

The fallers at the country store Saturday night was discussing this romance affair about Liz Taylor and this fellow Burton and that calls for a bag of discussing.

First off, Mrs. Burton allowed as how Mr. Burton was the kindest man in the world for allowing her to get her divorce on the grounds of him being extremely cruel. Ed Doolittle said nobody but a Solomon could figure that one out.

Then Liz, that changes husbands to match her wardrobe, has been married in four different brands of religious faiths and she's found one yet that has stuck. In the meantime, her and Burton has been living together for two years in what they were calling a "courtship" arrangement. The whole thing was so confusing that the fallers just decided Liz and this fellow deserved each other and let it go at that.

Cliff Webster was of the opinion that Liz was a good example of how the women-folks was getting to be more of a problem every day. At his house, for instance, Cliff said it was automatic for his old lady to have the last word, but what was getting him down was them thousand words she got down to the last one.

But Hookum allowed as how the law said a husband was the head of the house, and he had noted where the courts has ruled a peedestrian has the right of way, and Bug was of the opinion that both was safe if they didn't try to demand their rights.

When the fallers at the country store got to discussing women, Mister Editor, things can go in any direction. Zeke Grubb claimed we needed a new law again a woman having a hair-dresser one foot high. He said he might compromise for 18 inches and that was his ceiling. But it was general agreed they ain't nothing in the Constitution again them space babies. One of the fallers, recollected New York passed a law again the tattoo business but the big court held again the law, claimed it was infringing on personal liberty.

Joah Cloodhopper figured again the fallers was too hard on the women-folks, said he was reading a piece in the papers where a couple was celebrating their 50th wedding anniversary, and the husband claimed in all them years his old lady ain't never changed, the furniture around in the parlor. If he's telling the truth I'd have to say he got himself a gem of pure gold.

Personal, Mister Editor, the only thing I know for certain about a gal is that the first thing she notices about a fellow is whether he notices her.

Yours truly,
Uncle Dan

Mrs. Brawley Joins Husband In Munich

Traveling by plane, Mrs. Ralph Brawley, III, left Friday for Munich, Germany, where she will join her husband, Principal First Class Brawley, who is stationed there with the U.S. Army.

Mrs. Brawley is the former Miss Mullins-Craven, daughter of Mrs. and Mr. Henry Craven of 805 Pine street, this city.

St. Valentine's Hot Line Is Humming

The people who suffer most under Mooreville's generally aggravating limit on local phone calls are the teenagers. To most of them, the whole future or lack of it often hinges on a call from the proper party. They keep the wires warm all the time, but this week, St. Valentine's hot line really is getting a workout. Symbolizing the spirit of February 14, Friday, are Marsha Murray and Mike Little. Fletcher Davis did the photography and the art work.

ELDERLY CASCADE RESIDENT Mrs. Floyd Cook Dies In Home Fire

An elderly Cascade area resident, Mrs. J. Floyd Cook, died Tuesday at her home early Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Cook, lying on the floor of a rear bedroom, was dead when the firemen arrived on the scene.

Mrs. Cook, 77, apparently was the victim of flames that ignited her clothing while she was in the kitchen of the frame dwelling at 307 Burke Lane where she lived alone.

Mrs. Cook's burning clothing, it is thought, set the house on fire. The fire was discovered shortly after 1 p. m. by William Caldwell of Sherrell's Ford, a delivery man for a local pharmacy. In the area to make a delivery, Caldwell said he noticed smoke coming out along the eaves of the home.

He ran to the home, but found the front door locked. He then went to nearby Cascade Body Shop where he told Marvin Johnson of the fire, Johnson, a fireman, sounded the alarm.

Mooreville firemen and members of the Mooreville Rescue Squad rushed to the scene. They brought the fire under control in short order, aided by members of the Sherrell's Ford Department.

The former Miss Mamie Gabriel, Mrs. Cook was born in Catawba county, a daughter of the late William Pinkney and Amanda Parks Gabriel. She had lived in the Mooreville area practically all of her life.

Mrs. Cook died in 1957.

The survivors included: two daughters, Mrs. O. L. Karriker, Jr. and Mrs. Wiley Karriker, both of Mooreville, route 3; and two stepsons, Leroy and Wilburn Cook, both of the Cascade village.

One sister, Mrs. Lucy Barringer of Hickory, also survives.

Funeral services were conducted Tuesday afternoon at 2 p. m. See DEATH—Page 2

Staff Changes Are Announced At Moor Mills

DeLomar A. Woods has been named assistant personnel manager of Mooreville Mills, according to an announcement by S. E. Murdoch, vice president and division manager of Mooreville Mills.

Woods succeeds Ray Nesbit, who is joining the personnel staff of the Coolesville Plant of Erwin Mills. Both Mooreville Mills and Erwin Mills are divisions of Burlington Industries.

A native of Omaha, Neb., Woods transfers to Mooreville from Durham, where he served as personnel manager of the Durham plants of Erwin Mills. Educated at Alliance, Neb., High School and the University of Nebraska, Woods has been a member of the Erwin personnel staff since 1952. Prior to joining Erwin, he was in sales work in Raleigh. He is married to Mrs. J. L. Karriker.

Educational Plant Costing $300,000 Okayed By Church

The congregation of the First Presbyterian Church has approved architect's drawings of an educational building expected to cost $300,000. But construction of the new facility will not get underway, the church body stipulated, until a some-to-be-begun fundraising campaign reaches the $150,000 mark.

The decision to proceed with the building plans was made Sunday at a congregational session which was held following the morning worship service.

The action was taken after the plans had been fully explained to the members of the congregation by the church's Planning Council, aided by J. L. Beam of Cherryville, a member of the Cherryville-Gastonia architectural firm. Beam and Lewis. This firm was employed several months ago to prepare plans for the proposed structure.

A finance committee to spearhead the fundraising drive is in the process of being named.

Plans call for the erection of a three-story structure on the site now occupied by the church's inadequate 40-year-old educational building.

The new educational building will have 26,882 square feet of floor space and will be large enough to accommodate a Sunday School of 550 persons. Presently, some 300 persons attend Sunday School there.

Designed so as to blend in with the sanctuary, the new educational building will be of brick construction, with concrete block interior. A covered breezeway will join the new structure and the sanctuary.

It will face West McLellan avenue, but there will be no entrance into this street. All entrances into the building will be from the west side and from the rear. In addition to steps leading from the ground up to all entrances, there will be ramps for the convenience of elderly persons, who might be confined to wheel chairs.

The new educational building, according to plans, will be U-shaped and will be built around a sunken terrace.

The first or basement floor of the new educational plant, according to plans, will house a mechanical room, a kitchen, a janitor's storage room, a 50 by 67-foot fellowship room, complete with a 50 by 15-foot stage, and a storage area.

The main or second floor will house the administrative offices, church library, nursery and kindergarten departments, and adult classrooms.

On the upper or third floor, See STAFF—Page 2

Utilities Chief Sherrill Will Retire Feb. 29

Russell Sherrill, director of Mooreville public utilities since 1955, will retire at the end of this month.

The veteran municipal employee will step down after nearly 34 years of service with the town. He joined the water department staff August 1, 1930, and was promoted to department head five years later.

City Manager Cy Brooks said he has accepted Sherrill's resignation "with deep appreciation for long and faithful service."

"Mr. Sherrill has done an excellent job, particularly so during the vast expansion and improvement of the water and sewer systems during the last three years," Brooks said, "he is retiring at his own insistence, for while we wish him every happiness in retirement, we hate to see him leave us."

The city manager said Hubert Parker, chief water plant operator for the past several years, has agreed to serve as acting utilities director until Sherrill's departure.
