Central Methodists Will Hear Bolivian Missionaries Sunday

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Eppley, who have served in La Paz, Bolivia, for the past five years as educational missionaries, will speak at Central Methodist Church Sunday.

The Eppleys are native North Carolinians and are graduates of Duke University and the University of North Carolina. They were engaged in public school work in Greensboro before entering the mission field.

For the past two years, the couple has supervised the work of 12 rural schools in the altiplana region near Lake Titicaca. This region is situated at an altitude of over 12,000 feet.

Their work has been among the Aymara Indians whose literacy rate is one of the poorest in the world.

The Commission on Missions of Central Church has planned for Mr. Eppley to speak at the 8:45 and the 11:00 services. Mrs. Eppley will stay with friends of this work in Bolivia at 10 a. m. to the children and youth classes in the church's fellowship hall. A congregational covered dish dinner will be served at 12:15.

Central Methodist Church has supported the Eppleys for five years.

During this year of furlough, Mr. Eppley will work on his doctorate at the University of Illinois. They plan to return to Bolivia after Mr. Eppley earns the Phd. Degree.

What's The Best Bait To Use For Teeth?

My father-in-law is a seasoned Down East-type raconteur. During his holiday stay with us, Ray recalled this incident. He says he heard it for the gospel truth, but we'll pass it along without judgment on that point:

Down in our native Low Country, a ne'er-do-well got started powerful early on his Christmas celebrating. In fact, he had been reveling four weeks running when Christmas arrived. Christmas morning, the old chap was seen plodding along the highway, looking not at all in keeping with the occasion. A friend of Ray hailed the sodden old guy. In the course of their chat, the derelict mentioned that he had, indeed, been on a month-long jag and that he hadn't eaten in three days. The friend invited him to partake of his holiday bounty. "Can't," the pathetic fellow moaned, "lost m'teeth." Questions brought out that he had slept along the creek bank for the past several nights, taking only liquid nourishment—if you can call it nourishment.

It was agreed that the Samaritan would drive the down-and-outer back to his campsite in search of the badly-needed chompers. They arrived and began their search along the creek shore. The old man had the shakes, obviously in dire need of a few hairs off the back of the dog that had been biting him for a month. As they looked, the pair noticed the bleary chap was stooped, walking slowly, pulling something that was tied to a booze bottle. The fellow was trying to keep his wavering eye on the bottle that slid along behind him.

"What in the world you pulling that liquor bottle along the ground for?" the puzzled friend asked.

"Well, I figger that's the best way to find m'teeth," the old guy wheezed, "if I pull the bottle anywhere near m'teeth, why, they're bound to start snapping at it."

The similar story about the preacher who dropped his teeth in the well and retrieved them with a chicken bone only serves to add credence to Ray's yarn. Perhaps the old geezer had heard the play on preachers and their chicken diet. After a month on the sauce and three days without solid food, he probably figured he was in no position to quibble about methods.

Operation Rescue An Excellent Stimulant

Operation Rescue, the Iredell Scout District's intensive effort to save some, if not all, of the county units that lost charters during 1963, has ended on a less-than-complete-success note. Mitchell Mack and the Rev. Floyd Trexler, directors of Operation Rescue for this area, are nonetheless optimistic. Nearly half the county's 30 scout units disbanded last year, so Operation Rescue had a gigantic job to do.

"As expected, we ran afoul of the holiday rush," Mack said late last week, "but we are pleased with the project, generally."

There was solid progress in the Mooresville area. First Baptist has a new Cub pack, Broad Street Methodist reorganized its troop and First Presbyterian got its Cub unit going again.

"But where the real promise is," Mack said, "is in the new interest in scouting that Operation Rescue stimulated. We have a number of sponsors who are determined to get their units active again. The adults who pitched in on this drive really put their hearts in it."

We salute this handful of dedicated men who give so much of themselves to establish and maintain Boy Scout programs, a valuable source of direction and purpose for our youth.

Persecuted Portsiders Of The World—Unite

In our righthanded world, we have this stereotype lefthander: He (and a girl portsider only more so) really is a stubborn righthander who insisted early that his left thumb was tastier. He writes backward and upside down, he can't prop his arm out the car window while driving because how could he steer with a right arm that is practically useless? He can't be seated next to anybody at meals, because his port feeder and his neighbor's starboard-oriented operation are forever colliding. Righthanded medical men discuss seriously and at great length what mistake of nature produced this misfit. Some insist something just gets misplaced in his head. Righthanders, for the most part, just blame it all on pure cussedness. They wonder aloud why everybody can't be like them. They have a cliche about "lefthanded compliments."

Well, just you wait, 'eny 'iggins. Statisticians, mostly righthanded, naturally, have found that portsiders are on the rise. The percentage of lefthanded school children has doubled in the past 15 years. Eleven of every 100 students now have to muddle along in a righthanded world. (And what kid wouldn't write upside down and backward after years of making like a pretzel to take notes in one of those desks with the little writing board on the right side.)

Some of our best friends are lefthanded. We have found them to be warm, intelligent people. They bear up admirably under severe persecution. Now that there is evidence that the balance of power is swinging left (literally, not figuratively), we have a surge of hope. When we are finally in the ruling majority, we're going to change the world.

We'll start out by teaching everybody the difference between left and wrong—and we'll go on from there.

ACP Helps Iredell County Folks Do Conservation Job

The Agricultural Conservation Program is a practical program that, actually gets conservation work done on privately owned farmland, according to A. P. Hassell, Jr., executive director for the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation State Committee.

He pointed out that each year—through the Agricultural Conservation Program — the Government shares with more than a million farmers and ranchers the cost of soil, water, woodland, and wildlife conservation practices on individual farms and ranches throughout the Nation. Recent estimates show that program practices were carried out in 1962 on 1.2 million farms, of which about 200,000 were "new" participants on which no significant conservation measures had been carried out in several years.

In 1964, Hassell explained, special emphasis is again being given to practices with enduring benefits. Cost-share assistance is provided to farmers for carrying out such conservation practices as establishing and improving vegetative cover of grasses, legumes, or trees for soil protection, installing erosion-control structures, and practices for the conservation or more efficient use of water.

Practices of primary benefit to wildlife likewise are especially encouraged by the 1964 program. Both financial and technical assistance is available to farmers for developing or restoring shallow water areas for wildlife, for constructing ponds and dams for wildlife, and for other practices that will enhance wildlife.

Iredell Youths In Competition For Morehead Scholarships

Two Statesville Senior High School students and a third from Mooresville are among district finalists who will undergo interviews for John Motley Morehead Scholarships to the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

The Statesville seniors are Ronald James Baer and William Hill Guy. The Mooresville youth is Gary Walter Teeter.

Officials of the John Motley Morehead Foundation said the three will be among 24 students from the 12-county District VII of North Carolina to undergo interviews January 17 at Wilkes Hotel in North Wilkesboro.

All told, 157 Tar Heel boys are vying for the coveted awards that provide an all-expenses-paid undergraduate college education to recipients.

I. T. Avery, Statesville lawyer, is on the district selection committee that will interview area candidates next month. District winners then will go before trustees of the foundation for the final selections.

If a Statesville boy wins, it will be the fifth year in a row that Senior High School has provided a Morehead Scholar. Miles Foy, John Harmon, Gene Barringer and Jimmy Rogers are current scholars, making Statesville one of the few cities ever to have a scholar in each class at UNC.

The scholarship program was established in 1951 by John Motley Morehead. UNC graduate and industrialist who now makes his home in Rye, N. Y.

Cecil Ellis Leagans, Jr., of Mocksville is another area student who is in the district competition.

Six candidates will be selected at the district level for the trip to Chapel Hill. Last year, 53 scholarships were awarded to students.

Capt. Clyde Newton Completes Year's Language Study

Capt. Clyde L. Newton has completed a year of study of the Thai language at the Defense Language Institute at Presidio of Monterey, California.

After he completes 30 days of leave with relatives and friends in this area, he will serve 18 months with the First Special Forces of Okinawa. While he serves there, his wife, the former Maud Barger, and daughter, Theresa, will make their home on route 3, Salisbury, with Mrs. Newton's parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Barger.

Captain Newton, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Newton of Sarasota, Fla., formerly of Mooresville, completed 15 years of military service in November.

Mrs. Newton is a former member of the staff of nurses at Lowrance Hospital.

The One Spray That's Pure Fragrance. Refillable.

FOR ALL YOUR ILLS

A man with rheumatism will tell you he's got the weather bureau beat a mile when it comes to forecasting the weather. In fact, rheumatism may have been nature's first primitive effort to establish a weather bureau.

You may think this letter is intended to sell you a patented medicine for rheumatism. It is if you need it!

More importantly, however, it is intended to remind you that not only do we carry a complete line of drugs for your ailments — but also our prestription department is stocked with the finest pharmaceutjcals distributed by reputable manufacturers.

Bring your prescriptions to our store. We will compound them promptly and in accordance with your physician's directions—and at a fair price.

Ask Your Doctor To Call Medical Centre or Goodman Drug for Your Prescription Needs. Reasonable Drug Prices. Call Pharmacist's Home At Nights.
