Who Is 'Hand-Picking' Whom?

Two months ago we expressed the opinion in this corner that Beverly Lake was impossible as a gubernatorial candidate, that Dan Moore would make North Carolina a good Governor, that Richardson Preyer would make our state a great Governor.

In the light of recent events, we have had to revise our opinion about Mr. Moore. We no longer believe he would make North Carolina a good Governor.

It seems to us that both Lake and Moore are taking the low road in this gubernatorial campaign. They seem to be occupied more with sniping at Preyer than with projecting their plan for a better North Carolina.

First, they thought they had Preyer nailed to the mast with the Scales and communist angle. Their supporters pulled out all the stops on this one, probably hoping to stall the growing and spontaneous support for Preyer springing up all over the state. When all the facts were in, the bag was so empty that the metropolitan press in the state, even a paper here and there for Moore, advised them to shut up.

As these lines are being written, Mr. Moore is still trying to get his balloon off the ground by sniping at Preyer around the state as being the "hand-picked" candidate of the Sanford administration. Mr. Moore hints of significant secret meetings between Preyer and some of the characters in the Sanford regime. Characters, incidentally, who have helped wage an all-out campaign for better schools, against poverty, and who have contributed to giving North Carolina the finest four years it has enjoyed in this century.

Look who's talking!

Moore is the great white hope of an element in the Democratic party that dropped from favor under the Luther Hodges administration and has remained there under Governor Sanford.

These are the boys who "hand-picked" Dan Moore to make the run for the roses against Preyer. They tell you not of the back-alley deal they tried to make with the Beverly Lake crowd in Raleigh prior to the announcement of Moore's candidacy.

Moore had no sooner got the words out of his mouth than the identity of those who pushed him out there became crystal clear. Senator Sam Ervin knocked precedent into a cocked hat by hurriedly endorsing him from his office in Washington. Congressman Lennon, ex-congressman Woodrow Jones, former state representative Joe Hunt, all got into the act within hours.

And Moore talks about Preyer being "hand-picked." God help us!

Actually, Richardson Preyer has never been close to the Sanford administration or any other administration. He has never been a practicing politician, and his contacts with any political faction in the state have been more casual than otherwise. He was, for instance, far closer to Luther Hodges than he has been to anybody in the Sanford administration.

Preyer simply wants to serve the people of his native state as Governor. He quit a $35,000 a year lifetime job to offer his candidacy. Moore and his supporters will get no further with this "hand-picked" gag than they did with the Scales incident.

There were around 170 tickets sold to the breakfast for Preyer in Statesville last Tuesday morning. Jimmy Johnson took a nose-to-nose inventory of the group later and found that not half of the group supported Sanford in 1960. Even Preyer's campaign manager in Iredell, Billy Johnson, was an anti-Sanford man in 1960. But Jay Huskins, our colleague and neighbor in Statesville, liked it with a straight face as a Sanford outing.

The truth of the matter is that Moore's supporters are getting desperate. In their frantic efforts to get Moore into a second primary, they are sniping at Preyer like gnats around a thoroughbred's head. And with about the same results.

In the meantime, Preyer the dedicated thoroughbred that he is, takes the high road as he travels about the state telling the people his hopes, plans and dreams for a better North Carolina.

In Statesville, for instance — and here we quote at length from Cousin Jay's newspaper — Preyer said he was going to discuss exactly how to get things done in the state in his campaign. He said the state has had good government since 1900 and he intends to try to maintain that tradition.

Specifically he said that North Carolina has less bureaucracy than any other state except one and he wants to keep it that way; that there is a declining prison population in the state; that North Carolina is among the bottom five states in taxes and debts and he wants to keep it that way. He emphasized that he believes in fiscal conservatism.

Preyer said that the way to meet the challenges that lie ahead is to raise the individual income level of the people and cited statistics to show that great improvement has been made in the state since 1940.

He suggested that he would try to get more industry into the state and that industry would be invited to come in as neighbors willing to bear their share of the burden of citizenship and "live in the state — not off the state." More industry, better education and agricultural development are the keys to

22-Year-Old Killed Here When Police-Pursued Car Wrecks

A 22-year-old Cornelius man was killed Thursday midnight when his speeding, police-pursued car went out of control and wrecked on the Coddle Creek Road, a mile south-east of Mooreville.

Uncle Dan From Doolie Says:

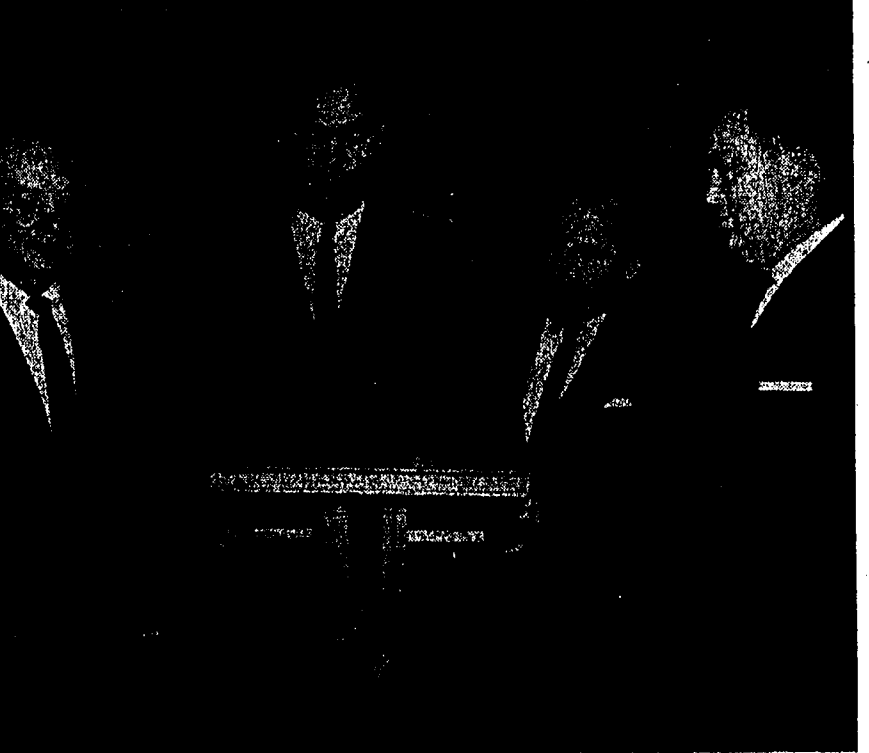

DEAR MR. EDITOR: The fellers at the country store Saturday night was discussing churches and religion. For the most part, they knew about as much on them subjects as a hog knows about Sunday.

We had a feller out here a few year back named Pat Barnwell that claimed he was a authority on these matters. He was always telling somebody how to get to Heaven. He was so ignorant he spelled Jesus with a little "g" but he was a expert on how to get to Paradise and afore long they give him the nickname of "Paradise Pat." But ignorance ain't never been no drawback to conversation when the fellers convene at the country store.

Saturday night, for instance, Ed Doolie told me that he had a long time ago they ain't but one thing worse than being on the wrong side of an argument and that is getting caught in the Round Church. When it comes to arguing about churches and preachers, I'm like the feller that said he belonged to the Round Church. He didn't let none of them git him cornered.

How the so ever, I will have to say they ain't no finer calling in life than being a rural preacher. I recollect reading once this statement made by William Jennings Bryan: "Doubtless God Almighty could make something better than a country preacher, but doubtless he never did."

Yours truly, Uncle Dan

Area United Fund Leaders Selected

Simpson Is President; Jones Accepts Key Post As Director Of '64 Appeal

The Mooreville-South Iredell United Fund can't be accused of resting on its laurels. Still basking in the glow of the most successful appeal in the history of UF in this area, officials of the organization this week began preparing for this fall's campaign.

Groundwork for the next drive was laid Tuesday morning during the annual meeting of the area United Fund. The 8 o'clock Dutch breakfast at the War Memorial drew about 30 persons, nearly all of whom were active leaders or workers in the 1963 campaign.

The top order of business was the change in administrations. The group unanimously adopted the state of officers recommended by the nomination committee. The committee's report was presented by its chairman, Mitchell Mack.

These are the leaders picked to direct the 1964 Mooreville area United Fund drive: John Simpson, last year's campaign chairman, was chosen president of the organization.

Jim Rosser, who retired as president, was seated as vice president, a newly-created position. The all-important responsibility of heading the fund-raising effort this fall was accepted by Dave Jones, who stepped up from chairman of the industrial division to director of the overall appeal.

Mrs. Joe Thompson was re-elected UF secretary. Veterans UF Treasurer Ralph Millsaps agreed to remain in that position. Len Sullivan again will serve as public relations chairman.

Charlie Gates again will serve as chairman of the budget committee. A second position was created, establishing T. C. Homesley as budget committee vice chairman. The group felt the task of preparing the UF budget is second only to raising money to meet it, and that a sharing of the load in this committee was in order.

A special guest for the breakfast was Bob Reardon, representative of Carolina United, the agency that coordinates the efforts of community fund-raising organizations. Reardon invited the officers after speaking briefly on what he termed the "tremendous spirit and cooperation" Mooreville displayed last fall.

Describing United Fund as "people helping people," Reardon said citizens of the Mooreville area demonstrated last fall they interpreted "U.F." as "us folks doing what we oughta."

The treasurer's report explained how well "us folks" did in the drive last year. UF had $2,685 on Millsaps said UF had $2,685 on October 1 of last year, before the drive began. Total cash available at the start of the year was $23,986. The UF office now has made 90 per cent payments to the seven local agencies it serves and it has paid full commitments totaling $2,303 to the area, state and national organizations that benefit through United Fund.

These first two courses will be taught by local Red Cross instructors. See FIRST AID—Page 2

18 PER CENT STILL UNDECIDED LBJ Defeats Barry, 3 To 1, In Mooreville Tribune Poll

Mooreville area voters favor President Lyndon B. Johnson more than three to one in a presidential match with Sen. Barry Goldwater.

Of the 50 voters responding, 31 said they would prefer Johnson. To would vote for Goldwater, and nine couldn't decide which one they liked.

In addition to stating their preference, quite a few of the persons polled had interesting comments.

"I'd hate to see Goldwater as president," stated one of those polled. "He's too radical and is bad to make statements before studying the matter at hand and before he has all the facts," continued the same voter.

"Goldwater's too loud mouthed and he's a Republican too," commented another man.

"I haven't decided yet, but I'll know in another few weeks," declared a younger voter.

A woman said: "I don't like Lady Bird, but put me down in the Johnson corner."

"Goldwater, by all means," said another voter.

A representative of the paper conducted the poll, asking persons at random the question as he met them on the street, in barber shops, and other local business firms.
