Here is an excerpt from The Insider's Newsletter that gave us a kick:

"The change of Administrations has brought with it a change of tone in Washington, a change in the way things are done—even if the things being done are the same as those done before. In order to aid in understanding this tone, this style, a compendium of new status symbols has been collected—pardon, we goofed already, we should have said corralled. It is, of course, necessary to master these if one is to find his way successfully these days in the Old-New Frontier. Hiking is Out; politics is In. Fiat mignon is Out; T-bone is In. Smokers

To believe the change is temporary, basing this belief on past experience.

Sales of cigarettes have been down before when there were reports but then the sales would get back to normal, one store owner declared.

Medicine to help break the smoking habit has also hit a new high in popularity. It was learned.

with the town limits. They are designated as Area One and Area Two.

Area One lies northeast of town. It is centered around Cascade Village. It extends along both sides of and between N. C. 150 and N. C. 115 to the north. It contains, in addition to the Cascade community, the Salisbury Road development, the area around and including the Rowan Dairy and several subdivided tracts. This area contains 422 acres.

Area Two is south and south west of town. It stretches from near Dunbar School across Shearer's Chapel Road, nearly halfway around the original circular boundary of the town. This subdivision takes in Pinewood Circle, the southwest portion of the Mooreville Village, a section of fast-developing Shearer's Chapel Road and an undeveloped tract east of Shearer's Chapel Road.

A vote of approval by the property owners involved is not required for municipal annexation. The annexing authority, however, is bound by rigid requirements set down clearly in the law. Mooreville must provide utilities in fact all services it provides other residents; to these newly-annexed areas within a year after annexation.

When the annexation program was first presented in early December, Brooks explained that the town's air conditioning system is to be completely renovated, and the offices will be relocated.

"The additional floor space," Kerr continued, "will permit the store to enlarge practically all of its departments—something we need for a long time."

"We are happy that we are now getting started on the actual work because we feel that, without a doubt, we will be able to better serve our customers with the enlarged store."

Belk's Department Store began operations in Mooreville in March, 1964. The move to the present location was made in August, 1963, and since that time, several additions have been made to the store's floor space, with the acquisition of adjoining buildings and the extension of old buildings.

Iredell Republicans To Hear West Virginia Congressman

West Virginia's sole Republican member of the U. S. House of Representatives, Arch A. Moore, Jr., will be the keynote speaker at the annual Lincoln Day dinner of the Iredell County Republicans on Friday, February 14.

Scheduled for 7 p. m., the dinner meeting will be held at the Statesville Elks Lodge.

Tickets for the $5-plate affair are now in the hands of county officers and precinct chairmen. As a limited number of tickets are available, reservations should be made early.

Ninth District Rep. James F. Brophy of Lewis, a close friend of Representative Moore, will also speak at the program.

Moore, who serves as Republican national committeeman from West Virginia, is often referred to as one of the nation's hardest working Congressmen. He has served four consecutive terms, increasing his margin of victory from 1962 to 1964 to 22,281 in 1964. It is interesting to note that Moore accumulated his largest margin of victory in spite of the fact that the late President John F. Kennedy and other prominent national Democrats came to West Virginia personally to campaign against him. Moore, who has already announced for re-election to a fifth term, is a lawyer by profession, and served in the West Virginia legislature before coming to Congress.

A decorated soldier of World War II, he now carries an unusually heavy committee burden in Congress as the fourth ranking Republican on the powerful Judiciary Committee and ranking minority member of the select committee on Small Business of the House.

He is the ranking minority member of the Subcommittee on Immigration and Special Subcommittee on Interstate Taxation. Moore holds ranking positions on the subcommittee handling the Small Business Administration and on the Joint House-Senate Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Moore has been a leading spokesman in the House against the importation of low cost residual fuel oil which in his opinion is the main factor in the depressed condition of West Virginia's economy. He has fought against and voted against the foreign aid program which permits low cost foreign goods to compete against American-made products at unfair prices.

His latest triumph came when his colleagues in Congress junked the administration's bill dealing with appointment of counsel for indigent defendants in federal courts, which would have permitted appointment of defense counsel by the district attorney, in favor of one bearing Moore's name.

Moore's name is also on the list of names for the new federal court building in Statesville, which would have permitted appointment of defense counsel by the district attorney, in favor of one bearing Moore's name.

IREDELL HEALTH DIRECTOR WARNS: 'Medicines Can Be Poisonous'

"Accidental poisonings from medicines left about the house are all too frequently reported to Ernest Ward, of Statesville, Iredell county health director.

"Aspirin and sedatives are among the drugs that are the most common and too often fatal, especially if left within the reach of small children," he added.

Many people are not aware that commonly used medicines such as aspirin can be poisonous when swallowed in excessive amounts, especially by children.

"The facts are that figures collected from 265 Poison Control Centers and issued by the U. S. Public Health Service this year show that more than 50 per cent of poisonings in children under 5 years of age were caused by medicines, and over 40 per cent of these were from aspirin. Approximately 70 per cent of the deaths among these unsuspecting children were caused by helping themselves to aspirin and aspirin-like medicines left within their reach.

During the first 10 months of last year more than 15,000 requests for help with poisonings were received by one Poison Control Center in the United States. "Centers such as this are performing a great service, but the best cure is prevention," Dr. Ward emphasizes.

To help avoid poisoning accidents the National Clearing House for Poison Control Centers urges:

(1) Store all medicines in locked cabinets;

(2) Never say to a child that medicine is "candy"—it may lead the child to take an overdose at the first opportunity;

(3) Try to avoid taking medicine in the presence of children—they love to imitate and play doctor and nurse;

(4) Remove unused medicines from cabinets and flush them down the toilet where they cannot be reached by others;

(5) Use drugs only for the person for whom they were prescribed;

(6) Where medicines are still in use, always return them to the cabinet—never leave them on a shelf, furniture or other place where a child may get hold of them, even by climbing; in over 80 per cent of children under 5 years of age poisoned by medicines and reported to the National Clearing House for Poison Control the medicines had been returned to their proper place;

(7) If you suspect that a child has swallowed a possibly poisonous medicine call a doctor immediately. Don't wait for signs of sickness to appear.

And remember, prevention is the best cure.

Several area doctors called the attention of the State Highway Patrol during the past week, and none of the people involved was seriously hurt.

Three persons sustained major injuries in a one-car accident three miles west of town on the Spruill School Road at 9:40 p. m. Sunday.

Treated for minor injuries and released from Lawrence Hospital, were Ralph Edward Kester, 24, route 2, Mooresville; and Edwin Leonard Carver, 36, route 2, Mooresville.

The car was estimated to be worth $100 to the Ford and $125 to the Chevrolet.

Approximately $200 damages resulted in a two-car collision at the intersection of U. S. 21 and the Nells Road at 8:30 p. m. Friday.

William Alexander Benfield, 35, route 2, Mooresville, was driving north in a 1960 Ford and Clyde Hollman Stuts, 40, route 2, Mooresville, was driving north in a 1965 Chevrolet.

Patrolman Mullis said that the Ford was driving south in a 1963 Ford and failed to make a right turn when the vehicle went off the right side of the road and traveled 650 feet before it overturned.

Nickel-Only Parking Meters Nixed

How Do You Like The New Nickel-Only Parking Meters?

Time was, you'll recall, when, if the stop was to be a short one you could put a penny in the parking meter and get 12 minutes of parking—safely insured against the traffic officer's $1 overtime parking ticket.

Or, if the stop was to be a longer one, you could put two pennies in the meter and get 24 minutes of parking . . . or three pennies and get 36 minutes . . . or four pennies and get 48 minutes . . . or a nickel and get 60 minutes.

All has been changed now, however! The town commissioners ordered the meters—all of them—converted to nickel-only meters. Therefore, you now have to put a nickel in the meter and get 60 minutes of parking even though you need only to park long enough to run into the store for a pack of cigarettes.

The town was compelled to install the one-time, one-coin system of parking meters because the State Supreme Court has held a municipality cannot legally collect overtime parking fines when multi-coin meters are used.

In view of the conversion of all meters to nickel-only meters, the "Diamond Look."

THE PEOPLE SPEAK:

The Mooresville Tribune's roving reporter asked the following question this week:

What has been your reaction to the new nickel-only parking meter?

The answers of the four, in full, were as follows:

SAM SLOOP, farmer, Mount Ulla, route 1: "I liked the old-type meter best. Many times you need to be gone only a few minutes."

MRS. ROY CREAMER, homemaker, 326 Cedar street: "Just now I didn't have a nickel. However, I guess the nickel-only meters are all right, but alright you don't need to be parked an hour."

MRS. JOHNNY BEAVER, Cascade Weaving Company, 238 West Statesville avenue: "Well, it doesn't make much difference to me. Usually, I spend more than an hour everywhere I go."

RONALD "ACE" CHERRY, Mooresville Mooresville Senior High student, route 3: "Doesn't make that much difference to me. I usually park in the public parking lots and, therefore, am not concerned with the parking meters."

Imp Girls Win, Boys Lose At Oakwood; Play Landis Friday

The Junior High sextet pulled its record in the Central Piedmont Conference mark to the 500 mark with an exciting 11-9 overtime victory over Oakwood last week.

Cochs Dave Richardson's five had cold shooting in the first and third periods and came out on the short end of a 49-38 score. The local boys fell behind 81 at the end of the first period of play, but came back with 13 points in the second period to trail only 19-14 at halftime.

Coldness again struck the Imp shooters in the opening stages of the third chapter as they were outscored by the homesteaders and despite a determined rally in the last quarter, just couldn't catch up, thus giving them a season record of 33.

Although hobbled by a knee injury, Mike Deaton was the top scorer for the Imps in collecting 14 points. Second high was John Beam and Tony Levan, each getting nine. Bill Keeter and Johnny Verble closed out the scoring by getting three points each. Joe Benson in a substitute role failed to tally.

Let's coaches Dan Woody and Barbara Dennis were high in praise for the work both offensively and defensively of Jane Kelly and Jane Church in their third win of the year. The regulation game ended with it knotted seven-all and in the extra time Miss Alexander and Jeanne Talbert each scored a field goal while limited Oakwood to a single two-point in their drive to victory. Alexander and Judy Kistler, each with three points, topped the scoring for the local girls.

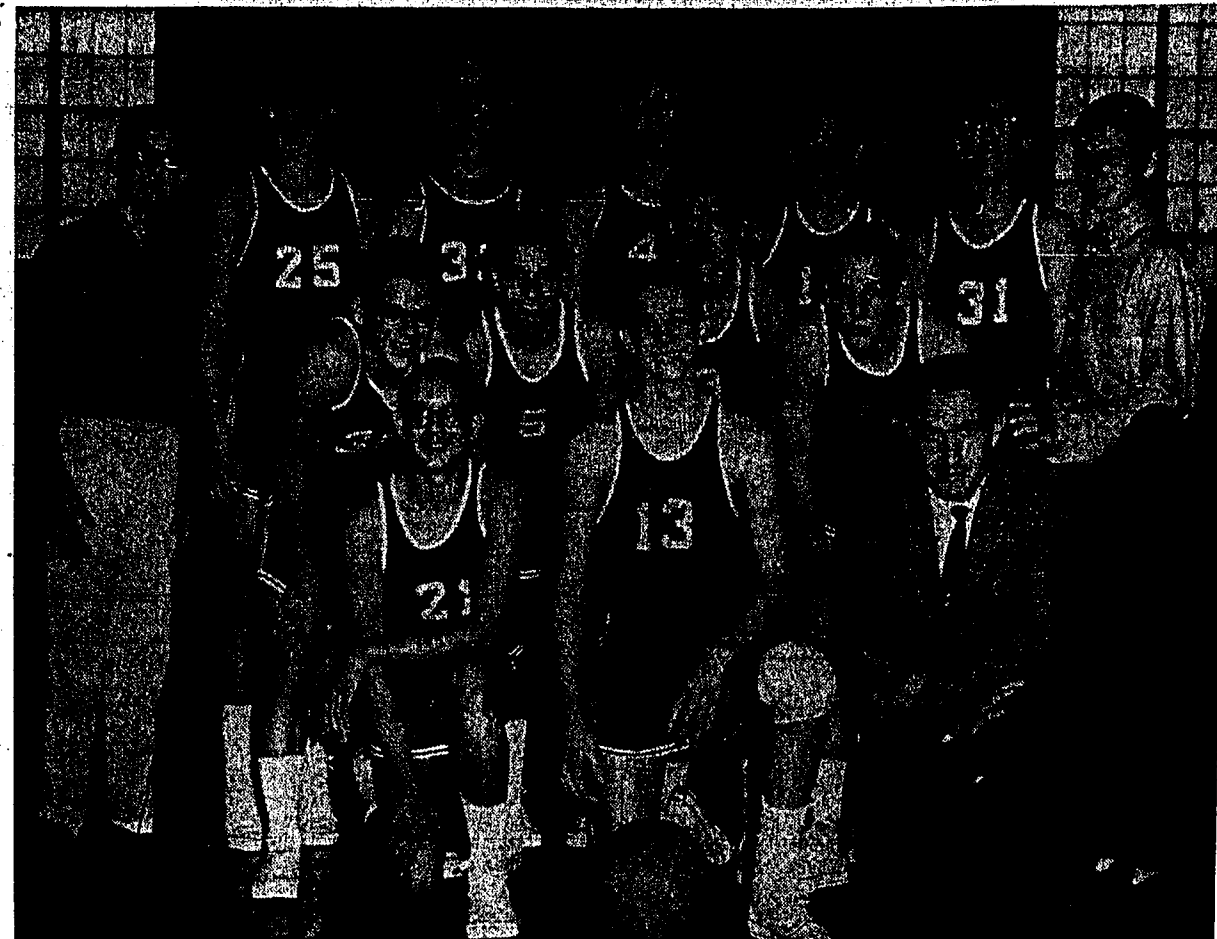

Imp Five Fourth, Girls Third In League Standings

Each team sports a 3-3 record. With the Taylorville girls in top spot with an unbeaten mark of 6-0, Oakwood heads the standings on the boys side of the ledger with a 4-2 record.

JUNIOR HIGH FIVE — Starting from scratch, the local Junior High School had the job of building up a team for the year. These are the boys Coach Dave Richardson labels as one of the best new squads he has had the pleasure to work with. The boys have come along real well and are doing a good job in representing their school in the Central Piedmont Conference. They are, first row, left to right: John Verble, Mike Deaton and Coach Richardson. Second row: Ricky Moore, Mitchell Coggins, Brent Curtis and John Goodman. Third row: Allan Mayhew (mgr.), Joe Benson, Bill Keeter, John Beam, Tony Levan, James Benfield and Terry Shinn (mgr.).

Recreation Cage Action Has Exciting Contests

Member teams of the Recreation Department's church basketball League are engaged in hot and heavy action on the Civic Center court. The season is at the half way mark with the girls championship almost tucked away by Troutman while the boys title is really up for grabs.

St. Luke's and Prospect, each with a 6-1 season record, are knotted for the top place while the fast charging men of St. Mark's are close to the leaders with a 4-2 record.

Second Presbyterian started the action off with a big bang last week when they racked up their first win of the season 68-48 over the Wilkes Bera five. Sharp shooting Len Sullivan had a real night under the basket, getting 26 points for the winners while losing Bera saw Don Buid pour in 18.

The First Baptist-St. Mark's team rode to a 20-14 decision over the Rocky Mount six with Allie Lee topping the scoring for the winners with eight points.

The Prospect ladies racked up their sixth win of the year with a 30-9 decision over the Southside sextet, with Mary Kipka topping the scoring with 14 points, and Bobbie Bentley getting 10 for the winners. Angie Plyler was top scorer for the losing team with seven points.

The Prospect lads had a real battle with the Central Methodist team before slipping to a close 48-46 victory. Oscar Goodman with a 16-point night along with Mike Brewer with 12 points keyed the Prospectors to victory. Lanky John Brown lobbed in 22 points in the losing effort.

Len Sullivan again went on a scoring rampage against St. Mark's in crashing in 22 points, but this wasn't enough as the St. Mark's five led by Larry Beaver who totaled 18 points downed the Presbyterians in another close game, this time by a 59-38 score.

St. Luke's, behind the 21-point effort by John Beaver, powered over the First Baptist five by a 50-38 margin. Larry Poteat with 12 points was second high for the winners while Herky Doster with 13 and Butch Doster with eight headed the losers.

The schedule this week calls for no games Friday night, then on Monday evening the Prospect boys will go against St. Luke's in the decisive battle for top spot in the standings. In the second game of the night the First Baptist boys go against the fast-improving Second Presbyterian squad.

Tuesday night, the girls will have the floor in the first game, which sends the Prospect sextet against the combination team of First Baptist-St. Mark's and the Prospect boys clashing with St. Luke's in a return battle on the same program.

How they stand:

GIRLS	W	L
Prospect	6	0
Rocky Mount	2	4
1st Bap-St. Mark's	2	4
Southside	1	5

BOYS	W	L
St. Luke's	6	1
1st Bap-St. Mark's	4	2
Southside	3	3
Central Methodist	1	5
Second Presbyterian	1	5
Bera	0	6

This was the first loss for Hinson in the past two years. He has proven himself one of the top grapplers in the unlimited class in association competition.

Other manning of the defeat was the loss by Larry Dyson to Mayhew who came in the school as head football coach at the beginning of the 1953 season.

Mayhew reports the team is working under into a fairly good outfit. The victory over South Rowan was a real feather in the cap for the boys who have worked hard during the earlier part of the season.

Troutman, along with North Rowan, East Rowan and South Rowan, formed a team for the first time this year and all have been having matches mostly between the first-year schools.

A complete rundown of the scoring in the South Rowan match:

Nation's Eyes On Scouts As Special Week Begins

Scout Week Officially Proclaimed

Mayor John Miller prepares to sign a proclamation designating February 7-13 as Boy Scout Week in Mooresville. Looking on as the mayor gives official endorsement to the annual observance are Cub Lynnie Sullivan, a member of Pack 163, and Scout Roger Stikeleather, a member of Troop 162. Mayor Miller called on all citizens of the community to join in honoring area youth and their dedicated leaders "who make scouting such a powerful influence for good in American life."

Iredell County District Participating In Event

This is annual National Boy Scout Week. Tomorrow through next Thursday, the eyes of Iredell county and the nation are on the goals and the achievements of the Boy Scouts of America — a 54-year-old movement dedicated to the service of God and country.

There will be a minimum of fanfare for an organization to which it is estimated 25 million United States youths have owed allegiance since February 8, 1910.

In Iredell county, a sizeable number of churches — of all denominations — will have services in which tribute is paid to the service-inspired, character-building program of the Boy Scouts.

Iredell county is one of 11 Western North Carolina counties comprising the Piedmont Council Boy Scouts of America — recognized as one of America's outstanding Scout organizations because of its phenomenal growth during the past 40 years.

The Council ranks highly also because of the quality of its membership, Scout advancement, participation in the camping program, and volunteer leadership on the part of adult leaders.

The Council, with headquarters in a handsome brick edifice in Gastonia and two summer training camps — one for whites and one for Negro youth — is made up of 405 units — troops, Cub packs, and Explorer groups — with a total membership in excess of 6,000 young men. Nearly 15 per cent of the boys and young men aged eight to 17 in the 11 counties are affiliated with the Boy Scout program.

Much of the organization's success can be attributed to top business and professional men who volunteer leadership, and to churches which sponsor troops, Cub, and Explorer units.

The headquarters building in Gastonia is recognized by the Boy Scouts of America as the best equipped service station to scouting in the Southeast and the only headquarters of its kind in the South. The building houses the business offices of the 11-county council. There is a banquet room on the top floor for dinner meetings.

The Piedmont Council's summer camp, located at beautiful Lake Lanier near Tryon, enjoys a national reputation as being one of the finest in the nation. To this camp comes a large number of Scout troops from any other camp in the South. During the past summer, nearly 2,400 Scouts and leaders attended in delivery to being the most beautiful, it is the best-equipped to give Scouts advanced training in the skills of Scouting. The waterfront is a beehive of activity during the summer as youths are training in swimming, lifesaving, rowing, and canoeing. During the past summer, several hundred lads learned to swim, many met the requirements of first-class swimming, and a large number qualified for the swimming merit badge, for which the Scout must be an expert swimmer.

Scouting is open to boys of all races and religions.

Scouting is designed to appeal to the adventurous nature of all boys, while at the same time developing wholesome character traits and physical fitness for service, and inspiring the habit of good citizenship. While the program does not include military training, it fits young men for military service in the event they are called to the colors. More than 75 per cent of those cited for heroism in World War II were Scout-trained.

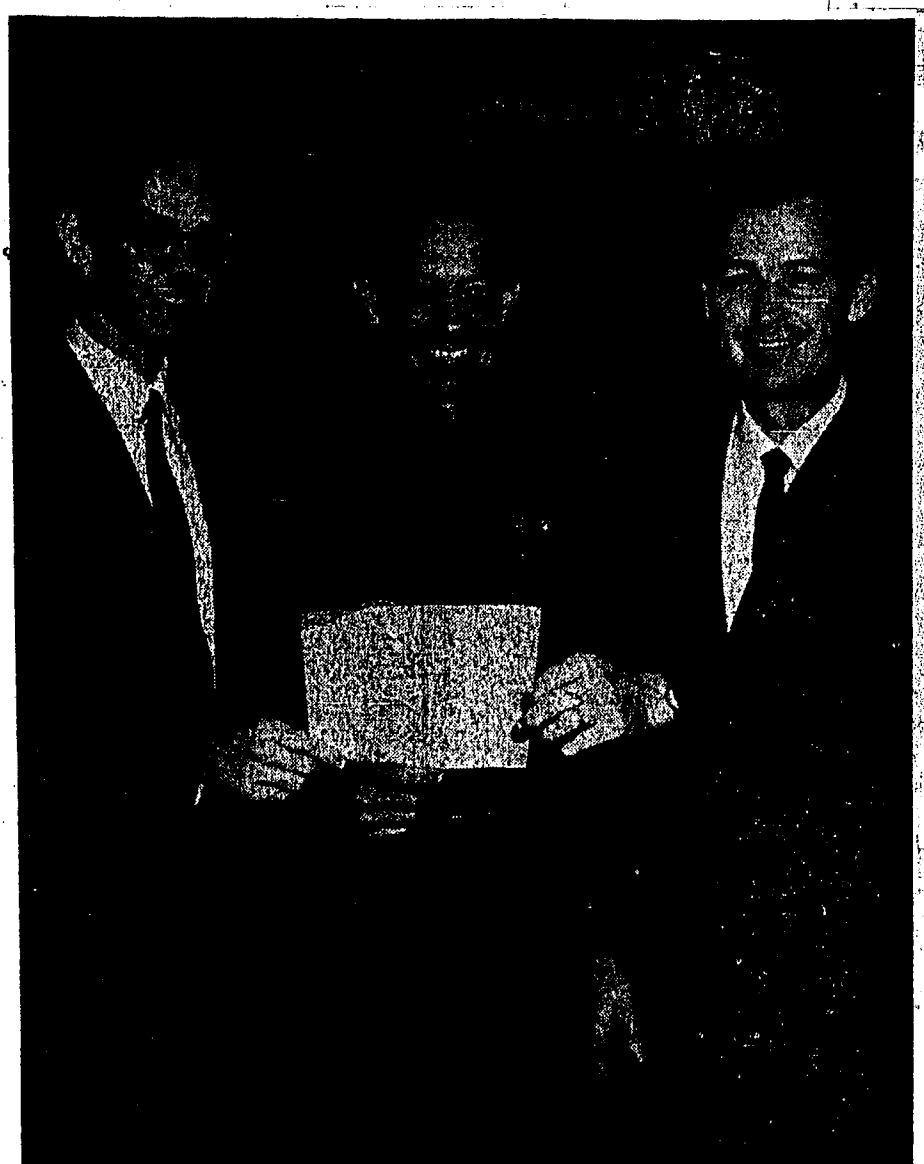

Young men trained for Scouting, rarely are found in the country's courts and penal institutions according to surveys which have been made. Scout training is a strong force in offsetting the spread of Communism. The Boy Scout movement is fought more actively by the Communists than nearly any other organization or group throughout the world.

Scout troops and Cub packs are sponsored largely by the church.

Men and women of the church give volunteer leadership and make Scouting and Cub Scouting possible for many who otherwise would be without it. The great need is for more troops, packs and posts to serve the still great number of boys who are not yet in the ranks of Scouting. A Scout troop or a Cub pack can be organized in any neighborhood where the doors of the church are opened to such constructive, democratic organizations, and where the men and women of the church are willing to help mold the character and the lives of future citizens.

Leaders of the Piedmont Council are always ready and willing to help such men and women to get started and to help in the all-important work of training youth for the responsibilities of citizenship.

Scout Troop Gets New Lease On Life

These men have reason to smile. They are leaders in Troop 353, a recently reactivated unit sponsored by the Methodist Men of Broad Street Methodist Church. They hold the charter that will be presented during ceremonies at the 11 a. m. worship service Sunday, February 9. From left are the Rev. Bob Goldston, pastor of the church and chaplain of the troop; Iud Hartman, scoutmaster; and John Roberts, institutional representative. Troop 353 is one of several area scout units that faltered during 1963, but now are back among the living.

Is There A Boy Scout That You Know... And Like?

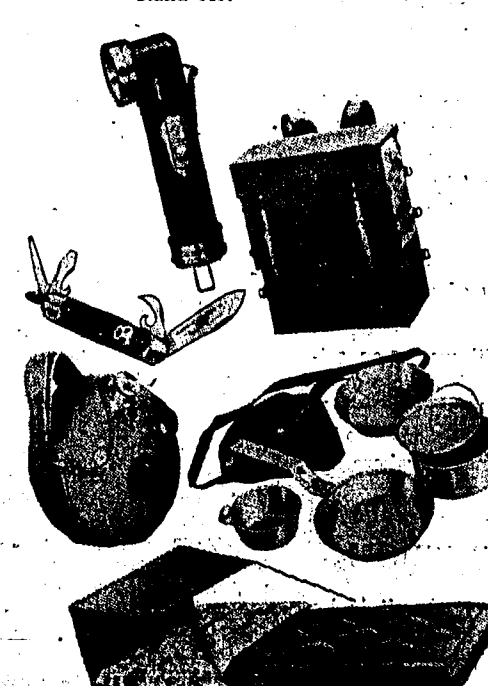

This is the week to show your affection towards him by giving him an...

Official Boy Scout Gift

When a lad joins the Boy Scouts of America it is usually because of his own desire that he teams up with this benevolent society for our youth. It reflects his ambition to serve God and Country and to help those in need.

February is BOY SCOUT MONTH and next week, February 7 through 13, is BOY SCOUT WEEK.

We at JOHN MACK & SON deem it only fitting, and a privilege, to doff our hats to this fine group of young men and all that they stand for.

So... To You... Our Scouts:

Congratulations on work well done! We know that your records will be an inspiration to others in helping build a better and stronger America.

How To Help Boys Into Their Inherited World

Things went not at all well for scouting in the Iredell District in 1963. There were disappointments on every hand, and reasons for them could be traced directly to one nagging problem—a chronic shortage of vigorous volunteer and professional leadership in the county's scouting program.

The crying need for more adult interest in scouting is a need that has been crying for a long, long time. The history of scouting teaches that success or failure rests not with the boys, but with the quantity and quality of men who direct training and administration within the youth organization. A diminishing corps of adult scouters finally took its toll in Iredell last year. More than half the county's 30-odd scout units were unable to renew their charters early in the year.

But 1963 now is behind us, so put aside the crying towel. The history of the Boy Scout movement also teaches that men have a basic compassion for youth, that when they are made aware of the needs of youth, they act. So it was last fall, when "Operation Rescue" was launched as a last-ditch effort to pump new life into the scout units that had fallen by the wayside. The intensive campaign did not work completely, but it was a fine fire-stroke rocket in the fight to get Iredell scouting back into its proper orbit.

At the end of the year, the district scouting program was back on course. A number of the units that became inactive last year now are back among the living. In addition, new troops and packs have been, and are being organized. The units that survived last year's blitz now are stronger than ever.

So, as we mark Boy Scout Week, February 7-13, we can observe the tribute to youth on a positive note in this district. Mitchell Mack of Mooresville has injected fresh, capable leadership into the program in his position as district chairman. His top order of business, he says, is to strengthen the administrative branch from the district through the local units, and to try and attract more men to scouting on the troop level.

For more than a half-century, Boy Scouts of America has enjoyed success and public acclaim for its part in the training of American youth in character values, citizenship skills and attitudes and physical fitness. Over these 54 years scouting has grown and flourished because the men and boys drawn to it are involved in the processes of life, they have deep convictions of the worth of the scouting movement.

A wide variety of events and programs will take place during the observance that begins Friday. Not the least of these is Scout Sunday, when the boys will attend church in uniform, and when many of the area ministers will build their sermons around the principles of scouting. What a scout stands for is in full accord with what the church stands for. It is fitting that the connection be publicly noted. As joiner of scouting moves along, we join in saluting these men and boys who are the movers.

All across the face of this land, the eyes of the nation will turn to this observance of the institution of scouting. Here in South Iredell, we will see boys in uniform in greater-than-usual numbers next week. These familiar uniforms will be filled with the future of this nation. The potential of these growing minds and bodies is unlimited. Today, they are boys in search of tomorrow. Tomorrow, they will be men in search of answers to the world's questions and problems.

During Boy Scout Week, an eager youngster may offer to help you across the street. This would be a polite and meaningful gesture. But what is more meaningful is for you to accept the long-term responsibility of helping these boys into your world. It will soon be theirs.

Parson Jones' Pulpit

DEAR MR. PUBLISHER:

Are you smoking more now and enjoying it less? The government has really tied a knot in the smoker's tail by giving out that bad old report on cigarettes. I understand that Mrs. Jones has gone to smoking cigars and pipes. I can just see Mrs. Jones coming to choir practice with a cigar in her face. Somewhere I read they were making cigarettes out of cured lettuce leaves.

They tell me it is so nasty that when you smoke one you swear you'll never have another. I don't see why ground-up crab grass wouldn't make a mighty good smoke. Course, back when I was a youngun we had all sorts of substitutes.

We use to smoke rabbit tobacco a hole lot. We'd roll em out newspaper and lick em shut with spit. It was a good smoke, but it didn't have no filler. Use to cut our tongue with just a few of them wouldn't get so sore. Another thing, if you puffed to hard the newspaper caught on fire and singed your eyebrows — and sometimes we even got a burnt snoot. It's a good thing that government committee didn't investigate rabbit tobacco.

Another thing we smoked back then was corn silk. Yes, sir, you take some dried corn silk and wrap em in newspaper, and you've got something that's quite this world. If you wanted a smoke a little on the strong-order why grapevine was awful good. Six inches a grapevine would last a fella all day. A pipeful a coffee grounds was mighty tasty.

I'm telling you all these things, Mr. Publisher, just to show you some of the possibilities for the future. Meanwhile, back at the church things ain't going so good in our Tobacco Anonymous Club. Out of the 23 members 20 has done broke over. Just yesterday they caught Big Slim hiding under the house smoking a cigarette.

I don't reckon anybody would know it, if he hadn't set the house on fire. I understand that a buncha sidlers were caught, while he was lighting his smoke. Fortunately Slim wasn't hurt bad. Ellie Nicklesinger has almost gone into running fits—she's so nervous. Carrying that 20 penny nail in her pocket and chewing on that chicken bone just wasn't enough to keep from going back into "the path of sin."

So, Mr. Publisher, we done made one change in the rules of our club. Insteads carrying a 20 penny nail they all carry a thumb tack, and when they gets so nervous they can't stand it, they just sit on the tack, and they forget all about smoking. I believe it gonna be a foot proof idea.

Mr. Publisher, I shore hope the government comes up with the answer to this problem. With the election year coming up I look for the politicians to jump from smoking to mid-alighting. The churchmen can then get on more serious subjects like the Panama Canal. See you soon.

P. S. Wonder why they don't put filter-tips on automobiles.

Yours truly,

Parson Jones

FARMERS — When in the city call at my CAFE and get a good dinner for only 35 cents. We have one of the best cooks in the State and our service is first-class. Try us. Theo. Patterson, On the Corner.

It has come to the notice of this office that many people fail to report suspicious and disloyal acts or manifestations of sympathy for the enemy, because of uncertainty as to the proper official to approach. It is very important that the Government should have the assistance of all citizens in detecting enemy propaganda or suspicious activities of individuals, and you will go to a service in notifying your friends that any communication addressed to "Intelligence Officer, Headquarters Southeastern Department, Charleston, S. C." will receive attention and be transmitted to the proper official of the Government for investigation. The names of informants will not be divulged and there need be no fear, on the part of anybody, of getting into trouble in case suspicions fail to be unfounded. Informants should indicate the nature and source of their information, as well as the time and place.

Mr. George C. Goodman spent Monday in Greensboro, where all the fuel administrators of the various sections of the State assembled to get a line on the situation from a government representative. It was the business of the government agent to impress upon the local men the importance of informing and urging the people in every section to buy and lay in their coal during the summer for next winter. It is going to be almost impossible to use the railroads next winter for the transportation of coal, as the cars will be needed to transfer troops and other commodities essential to the war effort. Don't delay in this matter, but get your fuel in during the spring and summer. It must be done to avoid suffering next winter.

Another flag of great interest to the community is a North Carolina State Flag, which was presented to the Mooresville graded school Wednesday morning. This flag is 3 1/2x5 feet, and will hang in the main auditorium in order that every child and visitor to the school building can become familiar with the flag of the Old North State. This emblem of State pride is the gift of the following men: D. M. Creswell, Rev. S. H. Hay, C. P. McNeely, Chief Linder, Dr. Taylor, Theo. Patterson, T. O. Bravley, H. C. Johnston, W. O. Sanders, Mr. Devane, M. W. White, Aircraft Theatre, Mort McKnight, R. O. Miller, E. W. Bravley, J. L. Moore, Jr., A. L. Starr, H. B. Mayhew, J. L. Fortner, J. P. Mills, P. S. Boyd, Z. V. Turlington and H. P. Deaton.

Master Archie Cathey, who has been brought home from the hospital at Statesville, is doing quite well.

Mr. Con Johnston, who is now located at Camp Greene, spent Sunday here with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Johnston.

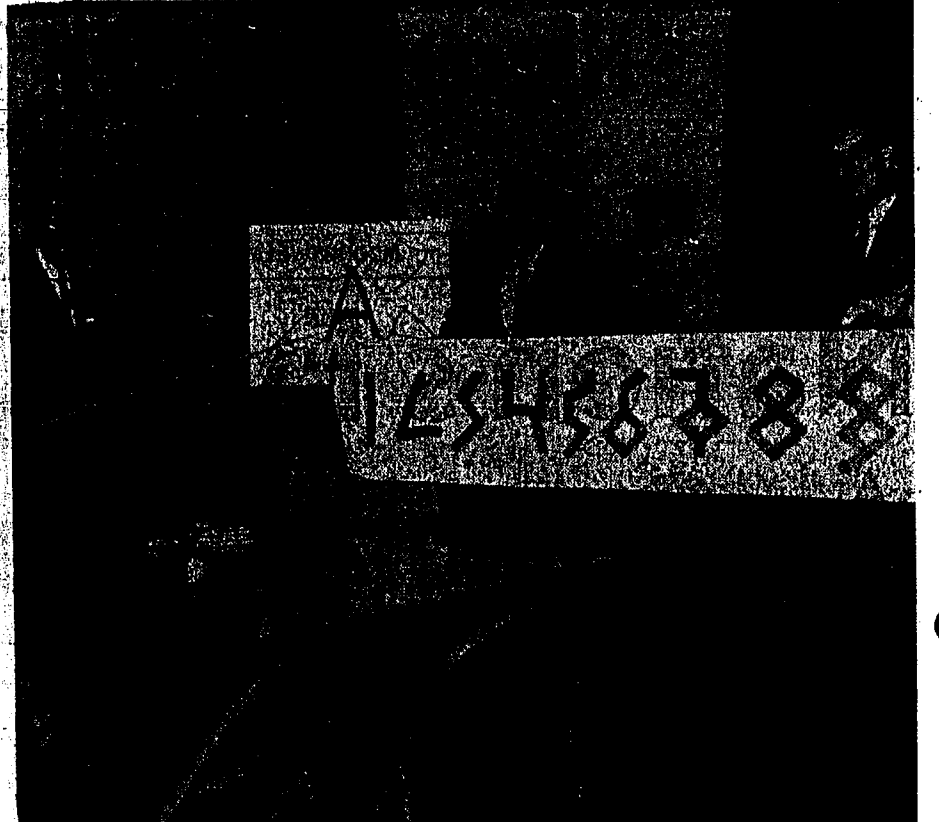

Capt. Fred C. Rankin, of Fort Oglethorpe, came in last Saturday morning and remained until Monday night, visiting his mother, Mrs. W. W. Rankin.

Practically all parts of the new bridge spanning the Catawba river at the old Brown-Trouman site west of Mooresville are now on the ground and workmen are busy connecting up the links. It will be only a short while now until at least one of Iredell's free bridges will be open to the public.

Mr. C. L. Kelly, of this city, and Mr. Sam Kelly, of Kannapolis, returned Monday night from Camp Sevier, where they spent several days with their brother, Sgt. Clyde Kelly, who is a member of the Piedmont Battery.

Mr. G. G. Adams, who was a student at Rutherford College during the term just closed, has returned to the city and has resumed work at the M. & F. Bank.

The nine colored men to leave here next Monday for Statesville, from where they will go to Camp Sevier, are: Glenn Sherrill and Brooks Slatts, Jr., of Statesville; John Torrance, Bee Simonson, Will Fortner, O. K. Campbell, Henry Smith, and Ernest Coble. Messrs. J. W. Sherrill and Brooks Slatts arrived Monday from Camp Sevier, where they spent the week and with their sons, Glenn Sherrill and Brooks Slatts, Jr., of Statesville; John Torrance, Bee Simonson, Will Fortner, O. K. Campbell, Henry Smith, and Ernest Coble. Mr. E. P. Harrington, returned Tuesday evening from Camp Sevier, where he spent several days with his son, Eugene Harrington, a member of the Piedmont Battery.

ADULTS LEARN, TOO — The primary function of scouting, of course, is to give purpose and direction to boys. But scouting, to borrow a phrase, is a pleasure meant for adults, too. Men who work closely with boys find themselves learning along with the eager youngsters. These scouters, in turn, pass along their new-found knowledge to others in and out of scouting. During a recent meeting of the Mooresville Rotary Club, these men had fun explaining the origin of our present day alphabet and numbers. At left is Paul Kennedy, advancement chairman for the Iredell District. Holding this display of numbers are Mitchell Mack, left, district chairman; and Howard Smith, district scout executive.

Mooresville's Frank Burke: Actively Engaged In Scouting Since Age Of 12

Frank Burke enrolled in the local Scout organization even before he came here some five years ago. During his few years in Mooresville, the energetic New Yorker has established himself as a driving force within the area youth organization.

Perhaps more than any other volunteer leader in the district, Burke considers youth work a natural part of his life. When Drymore Manufacturing Co. assigned Burke to its plant here as production manager, he already had registered with Troop 1. He began duties as assistant scoutmaster of the troop as soon as he got into town.

During 1962, Burke served as District Organization and Extension chairman.

Burke, now 35, has been involved in Boy Scouts in one capacity or another since he was 12 years old. He grew up in New York and considers Queens Council the most important part of training and recreation in his early years. In New York, he moved rapidly up the leadership ladder and in 1948 he took his place among the adult leaders in the Council. He was assistant cubmaster one year, scoutmaster three years, institutional representative two years and assistant advisor of an Explorer Ship four years.

As recognition for their regard for him, some 200 members of the Scout organization in New York gave Burke a going-away testimonial dinner when he was transferred here.

Since coming to Mooresville, Burke has served as Troop 1 assistant scoutmaster part of a year and he was vice-chairman of the Iredell District three years ago. He is a member of St. Theresa's Catholic Church, and although the church does not sponsor a Scout group, Burke has many boys in the church enrolled in other town troops.

The American Scout Banner and the World Friendship Flag are Frank Burke's most outstanding contributions to Boy Scouts. Both of the works originated in Sea Explorer Ship 232 in Broad Channel, N. Y., when Burke was serving as assistant advisor for the ship.

The friendship flag is a collection of embroidered names of Scouts all over the world. The idea began when members of the Explorer Ship started writing to Scouts in other countries. Soon, the boys began exchanging Scout patches and emblems. The names collected by the boys have been placed on a larger banner grouped around the American flag. The flag's popularity has grown steadily, and it still is being shown to Scouts in the New York area.

The American Scout Banner, another of Burke's projects, is a collection of banners and Scout insignia from throughout the United States. It is considered a companion to the World Friendship Flag, which has been shown on television programs and put on display at many Scout conferences in New York. Burke was given the American Scout Banner when he left New York, and is one of his most valuable possessions.

GOOD

Scouting is neither military nor anti-military. It carefully avoids political or commercial entanglements.

Scouting knows no race or creed or class. It is available to both farm and city residents. It serves the rich and poor alike. Its aim is to help each of these boys to become THE BEST CITIZEN that he can make of himself.

BOY SCOUTS OF AMERICA

Smith Serves As Scout Head In District

Howard T. Smith of Statesville, Scout executive of the Iredell District, Piedmont Council, Boy Scouts of America, is a veteran of eight years of professional scouting.

Thirty-six years of age, Smith is a native New Yorker but has been a Southerner since 1942. He accepted the post as Iredell District Scout executive in November, 1961. Before coming to Iredell county, he served as Scout executive for the Burke, McDowell, Polk and Rutherford districts.

Smith was born in Rochester, N. Y., and attended school there until his family moved to Monroe in 1942. He graduated from Georgia Military Academy in 1944, and a year later he entered the Army. Smith served in the Philippines until his release in 1946, when he joined his parents at their new home in Clearwater, Fla.

The district executive studied at the University of Rochester from 1948 through 1950. He entered business in Florida in 1950, and remained in Clearwater until he entered full-time scout work in 1955. Prior to joining the Piedmont Council January 1, 1959, Smith served as district scout executive in the Central Florida Council, with headquarters in Orlando.

Smith attended the 193rd national training school on the Schiff Scout Reservation in New Jersey in 1955. He is well known in this council for his work as a member of the staff of the Piedmont Boy Scout Camp in 1959, and as camp director the following year.

The new scout executive for Iredell is an Episcopalian and a member of the Statesville Kiwanis Club.

TEACHING EACH OTHER — Franklin Rader (wearing glasses) was among some 30 Piedmont Council scouts who participated in a camping program last summer at the Philmont range in New Mexico. A senior patrol leader in Troop 164, young Rader has the responsibility of assisting less experienced boys in his unit. Members of his patrol gather around him as he discusses troop activities during a recent weekly session.

Explorer Program Leads Into Dedicated Service

The Explorer program, a comparative late-comer to the Scout movement, allows members to plan and participate in meaningful activities that will carry them on into strong and dedicated citizenship.

Behind each post stands a post committee of three or more men appointed by the district or council organization. This committee secures the services of several adults to guide the work. The key man among these officers is the Advisor, who is assisted by associate advisors.

The Explorers are active in six experience areas which make up the program:

1. Vocational experiences to provide opportunities for exploration into various skills and occupations.
2. Outdoor experiences for adventure and recreation.
3. Personal fitness experiences to help in the development of self-reliance through physical, mental, and emotional growth.
4. Service experiences to furnish occasions for helping other people and taking on unselfish leadership responsibilities.
5. Citizenship experiences to give a clear understanding of American democracy and the rights and duties of a citizen.
6. Social experiences to improve the Explorers' ability to get along with other people — friends, strangers, adults, girls.

The Explorers' Code is: "I believe that America's strength lies in her trust in God and in the courage and strength of her people. I will, therefore, be faithful to my religious duties and will maintain a personal sense of honor in my own life. I will treasure my American heritage and will do all I can to preserve and enrich it. I will recognize the dignity and worth of my fellowmen and will use fair play and good will in dealing with them."

"I will acquire the Exploring attitude that seeks the truth in all things and adventure on the frontiers of our changing world."

The Explorer emblem gives the general impression of movement and speed — directed movement and controlled speed. The design is dynamic — suggesting that Exploring is dynamic, creative, forward-looking, modern. The "V" in the center is symbolic of the Explorer's growth and progress. It is formed by two prisms representing his duty to self and duty to his fellowman. As they merge, they point into infinity — symbolic of his duty to God. The circles represent the Explorer's environment — his home, school, community, and nation. The red, white, and blue colors of the circles remind him of his American heritage.

The green Explorer uniform is the perfect outfit for many activities; it has the rugged stamina that makes it ideal for wilderness adventures. For other activities, the optional Explorer outfit sets the pace for the program. Campus-styled blue blazer with emblem, gray slacks, white shirt, and maroon tie make an attractive combination that suits the taste of a teen-ager for all dressup occasions: formal, community events, conferences.

Explorers get together for post meetings at least twice a month. There is usually a short business session, but most of the time is used for the special activity of the month.

In the summertime, such an activity may be a splash party, a local swimming pool, a visit to a children's hospital to entertain the young patients, a Saturday night at a rifle range or golf driving course. In the winter, the looked-to event may be a co-ed dinner-dance, attendance at a town council meeting, or safety service at some public event.

Every day that passes brings the Explorer closer to the problem of selecting his life work. He looks out on a world in turmoil, spinning at jet speed, and knows that he, too, must take his place in it to make his contribution while providing for his own survival. He realizes more and more that whatever he will amount to in the future depends on the decisions he makes today, that his educational plans of the movement must be consistent with his job aspirations as an adult. Question upon question clamor for an answer.

Scouting Teaches Self-Reliance

Excellent Aid In Today's Busy World

Scouting helps boys meet the demands and opportunities in this increasingly complex world.

Three programs, for boys of three age levels, are designed to develop physical fitness, self-reliance, an obligation to God, a sense of personal responsibility, an attitude of service to others, a willingness to share with others, and living the free way of life.

As a supplementary program to the nation's basic institutions — the home, the church, and the school — the Boy Scouts of America has the cooperation of religious, civic, business, labor, and educational interests.

These groups are chartered by the National Council of the Boy Scouts to carry on the programs for its boys and those of the community, all under selected, competent, trained adult volunteer leaders—1,200,000 of them.

Today there are 3,000,000 boy members in the 111,000 units which are found in American communities almost everywhere.

Scouting contributes to the family unit with parents taking active part in many Scouting activities.

Cub Scouting, for boys eight, nine, and 10, teaches a boy to do interesting things — handicrafts, collections, games, stunts, nature, and hobbies — in his own neighborhood with his parents.

Boy Scouting with its out-of-doors program teaches the boy of 11 through 18 to be self-reliant. He learns first aid so that he may be helpful to others and able to take care of himself in times of emergency.

Through Exploring, the boy 14 and older gets a well-rounded program of outdoor, social, service, and vocational activities.

CHARTER PRESENTATION SLATED — The new Cub pack at First Baptist Church will receive its charter Scout Sunday, February 9, during ceremonies at the 11 o'clock worship service. These men are among the church leaders who worked to organize the new unit, and who will have key roles in the future of the pack. Willis Shumake, institutional representative, holds the pack charter that will be presented Sunday. Scoutmaster Bill Lane is seated. Standing, from left, are Cy Brooks, committee chairman; the Rev. Bob Shepherd, pastor of the church and pack chaplain; and Bill Harwell, assistant scoutmaster.

"The Boy Scouts of America, since it was founded in 1910, has contributed greatly to the character training of our youth. What a greater nation this would be if the principles of Scouting could be woven more closely into our daily lives. If we can impress upon our youth principles of friendliness and mutual respect, we shall go a long way toward establishing a better understanding among the nations of the world."

"The Boy Scouts of America is making a vital contribution to the character building of our boys and young men. Let us work together to make the program of the Boy Scouts available to every American boy."

Man Lost In Britain's 'Pea Soup' Fog Discovers Boy Scout Movement

(Editor's Note: The following dramatic story of how the Boy Scout movement was born in America is part of the text in "The Golden Anniversary Book of Scouting," published by the Boy Scouts of America on the occasion of Scouting's 50th year in this country.)

The British capital lay in the grip of a dense "pea soup" fog. It had rolled in during the night and had enveloped the whole city in its smoky yellowness. The famous London buses, crowded with passengers, were stopped at a red light. A man walking slowly along the street, his head bowed, was looking down at the ground. He was looking for a lost button. He had lost it, he felt, but he had not found it. He was looking for it, but he had not found it. He was looking for it, but he had not found it.

A first glimmer emerged from the gloom. A boy moved past the man — then turned and came back.

"Can I help you, sir?" the young star asked.

"You certainly can," said the man. "I have a business appointment somewhere around here. I'll be much obliged if you'll tell me how to get there. There was no mistaking the man's nationality—he spoke with a decided American accent."

"If you'll give me the address I'll take you there."

As they reached the destination the American pulled a shilling from his pocket for a tip.

"No thank you, sir," the boy said, "not for doing a good turn."

"And why not?" the American asked.

"Because I'm a Scout!"

"A Scout? And what does that mean?"

"Haven't you heard about Baden-Powell's Boy Scouts?"

The American had not. "Tell me about them," he said.

The boy told him what he could of himself and his brother Scout and all the fun they were having in Scouting.

But the American wanted to know still more.

"I know where you can find out," said the boy. "Our headquarters is close by, on Victoria street. The General may even be in the office today."

"The General?"

"Baden-Powell, himself, sir."

"Fine," said the American. "Let me finish my errand. Then, if you have time, we'll go to your headquarters."

The boy waited, then showed the way to the Scout office — and disappeared before the American had a chance to learn his name.

At the Boy Scout headquarters, the American — 51-year-old William D. Boyce, newspaper and magazine publisher from Chicago — met the founder of the Boy Scout movement, the British military hero, Lt.-Gen. Robert S. S. Baden-Powell, and learned about Scouting from the Chief Scout himself.

Boyce became tremendously impressed with the possibilities of the movement that Baden-Powell had started. Through his business enterprises, he had had many dealings with boys, but no experience with them had ever struck him as forcibly as his first encounter with a Boy Scout.

When he left for the United States a few days later, he carried with him a trunkful of Scout literature, uniforms, and insignia.

The moment he arrived home, he took steps to introduce the Boy Scout idea to America. He consulted with his friend, Colin H. Livingston of Washington, D. C., and with other people in the country's capital, and with them established a new corporation — Boy Scouts of America, February 8, 1910.

In this way, a good turn done to a stranger by an unknown English Scout brought Scouting to the United States.

Seventeen years after he had done his good turn, the boy who had wanted nothing for himself, received the highest award the Boy Scouts of America has to offer — the Silver Buffalo presented for "distinguished service to boyhood."

The boy himself was not there for the ceremony — he was never found — but the Prince of Wales was there to receive the award in his behalf. A plaque with a simple eloquent inscription was unveiled: "To the Unknown Scout Whose Faithfulness in the Performance of the Daily Good Turn Brought the Scout Movement to the United States of America."

"Baden-Powell, himself, sir."

First Stirring Of The Boy Scouts In America Is Very Dramatic Story

The biggest task that lay before James E. West when he became Executive Secretary of the Boy Scouts of America in January, 1911, was to shape, out of the Boy Scout scheme created in England by Lord Baden-Powell, an American program acceptable to American boys.

He went about this in a way that was characteristic of all his work in the Boy Scouts of America: he called to his aid men outstanding in the fields that needed to be investigated and acted on.

At the first annual meeting of the Boy Scouts of America, in Washington, D. C., a month after West took office, he proposed establishment of four committees for getting the job done. These committees were appointed on February 14, 1911. These had to do with standardization of the Scout Oath and Law, requirements for ranks, badges, awards, and equipment; and permanent organization and field supervision.

Of these committees, the Committee on Standardization held a great number of meetings during March and April, 1911. Its work consisted in the revision of the Scout Oath and Law, and requirements were sent out to 100 educators — university presidents and professors — with requests for criticisms and suggestions.

The committee gave much consideration to a possible substitute for the term "Scout Oath" — investigating the meanings of such synonyms as "pledge," "vow," and several others.

It was agreed, West finally reported, that the word "promise" was not strong enough to grasp the imagination of the boys; that the word "pledge" had been given a distinct temperance connotation; and that the word "vow" had too much of a religious significance. Therefore, the word "oath" was retained.

Out of the work of this committee came the Scout Oath and Law, which has stood unchanged over half a century.

"On my honor I will do my best to do my duty to God and my country, and to obey the Scout Law; to help other people at all times; to keep myself physically strong, mentally awake, and morally straight."

Besides simplifying the wording of Baden-Powell's original Scout Law by expressing each point in a single word — "trustworthy," "loyal," "helpful," etc. — the most notable change was the increase of the Law's nine points to 12, with inclusion of: "A Scout is brave," "A Scout is clean," "A Scout is reverent."

The 12th point, "A Scout is reverent," was included on initiative of James E. West. In his opinion, no boy could grow into a true man and a true American citizen without a deep religious conviction. The wisdom of West's insistence became evident over the years as one religious body after another enthusiastically endorsed the Boy Scouts of America and adopted the Scout program in its youth work.

In the Americanization of the Scout program, the committee quickly discovered that very little needed to be done — Baden-Powell had built well.

In his tests for Tonderfoot, Baden-Powell had included knowledge of the Scout Law, Scout sign and salute, of the composition of the Union Jack and the right way to fly it, of four knots. The night changes were the substitution of a knowledge of the United States flag and an increase of the required knots to nine.

The original Second Class test were kept intact: one month's service as a Tenderfoot, basic first aid, elementary signaling, tracking, Scout's pace, fire-lighting, cooking, saving, compass, knot, and so on, coming up with a design based on the military uniform current at the time in the U. S. Army, with a khaki uniform coat with a high collar and four large bellows pockets, khaki breeches, khaki web belt; khaki colored, stiff canvas puttees reaching to just below the knees; and brown shoes. Within a few years, this uniform was found unsuitable and the National Council reverted to the traditional Scout uniform, with the characteristic neckerchief, the comfortable shirt, shorts or breeches, and the broad-brimmed hat.

The original Scout badge, designed by Baden-Powell, was based on the arrowhead — or fleur-de-lis — that indicates the north direction of the magnet's compass. The idea in adopting this was to suggest that a Scout should be as dependable as a compass and should point the way to the right with his ends turned up, and carrying the Scout motto: "Be Prepared."

The committee decided to retain this basic design, but to Americanize it by superimposing on it an American eagle and a modified American shield. The rough sketch, submitted by Dan Beard, was turned into a finished design by Clifford H. Berryman, cartoonist for a Washington newspaper. The design was granted a design patent by the U. S. Patent Office in July 4, 1911.

The committee was less successful in redesigning the uniform. Baden-Powell's original called for a colorful uniform consisting of a broad-brimmed hat, a brightly-colored neckerchief; blue khaki or gray shirt; blue or khaki shorts; brown leather belt; dark-colored or khaki stockings; brown or black shoes. The committee kept the hat only, coming up with a design based on the military uniform current at the time in the U. S. Army, with a khaki uniform coat with a high collar and four large bellows pockets, khaki breeches, khaki web belt; khaki colored, stiff canvas puttees reaching to just below the knees; and brown shoes. Within a few years, this uniform was found unsuitable and the National Council reverted to the traditional Scout uniform, with the characteristic neckerchief, the comfortable shirt, shorts or breeches, and the broad-brimmed hat.

New Scout Exec Offers Greetings

Eugene C. Bowden, who recently assumed his duties as Scout Executive of the Piedmont Council, Boy Scouts of America, has released for publication the following letter, addressed to volunteers and friends of Scouting:

Your loss, when Gene Jones was called to another Council, was the Bowden family's gain. I would not say that we are settled but we are making progress and have found that the Piedmont Council is a most friendly and happy place to live.

Everyone has gone the second mile to make this transition in Scout Executives go as smooth as possible. I will not try to list the names of the people who have helped but I would like to express a special thanks to Tom Rankin who took over the office during this time and helped me find things upon my arrival. The ladies of the office are also to be commended.

As I have traveled around the Council attending meetings and meeting people, I have been impressed with the dedication and scouting know how and the willingness to do things on the part of the Scouters. I have met. It makes me feel proud to be a part of such a wonderful team, dedicated to serve boys.

1963 is history and can do little except to help us plan for the new day. Each of us needs to look at our place in the program, study what has been done, arm ourselves with know how, select an objective, build a plan of action, get enough help to do the job, and step out to make 1964 the best year for Scouting ever.

Our THEME for 1964 is "Strengthen America, Scouting Can Make the Difference." Working together we can make this a reality, but "we must put the cookies on the bottom shelf so the boys can reach them." To do this, we must have good Scouting in Units, in Districts and through out the Piedmont Council. At the present time we are only reaching about 15% of the boys. We can and we must do a better job.

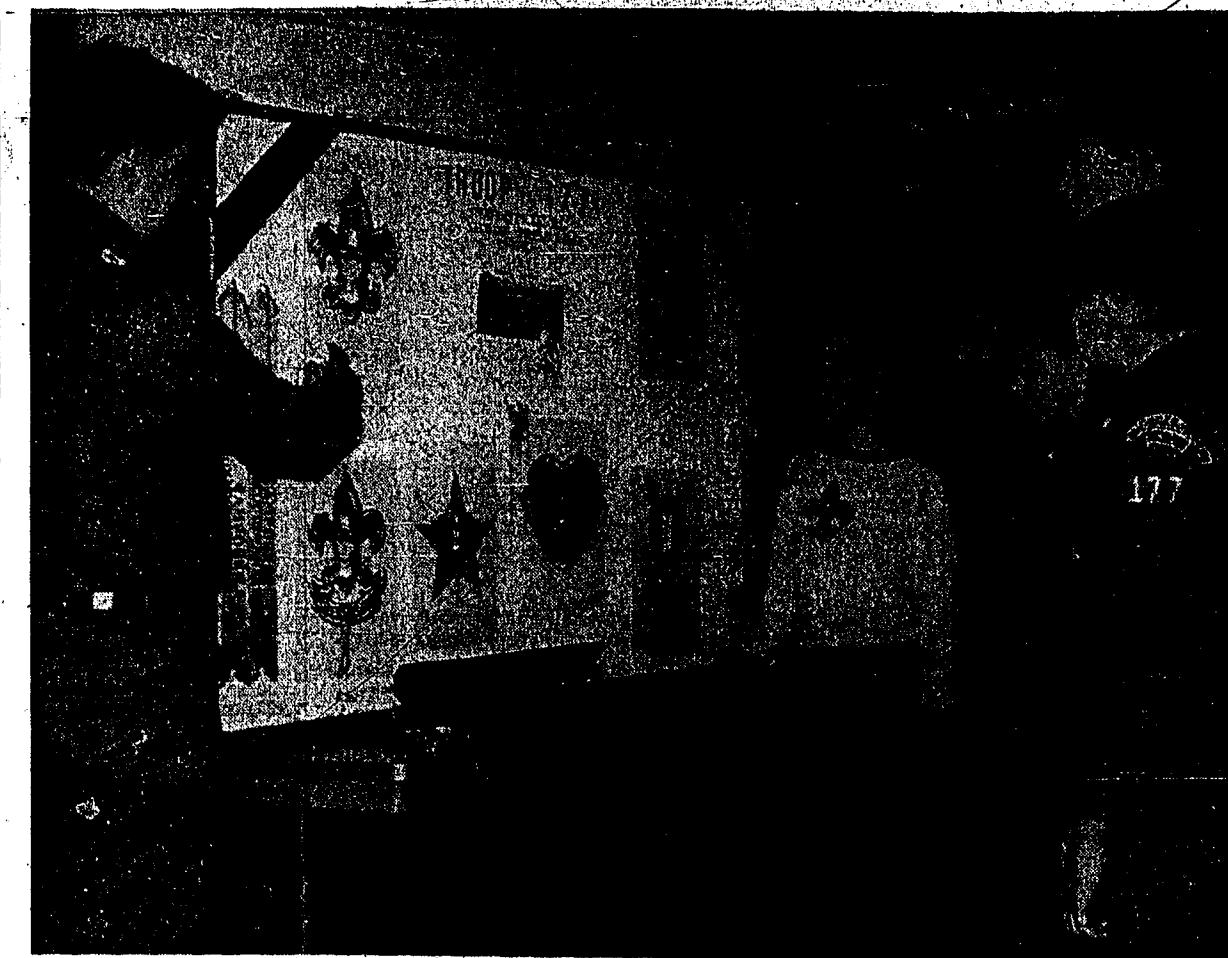

Working together we can be "the men and women who make the difference," but the boys won't wait. We must take action now or they will have moved on.

Five components of the program are: Christian Faith, Christian Outreach, Christian Witness, Christian Citizenship, and Christian Fellowship.

Any boy of Protestant faith who is a registered member of a Boy Scout troop or Explorer post may qualify for a God and Country Award. The troop or Explorer unit need not be sponsored by his own church.

The candidate must fulfill the religious requirements for the award in his own church under the guidance of his own minister. To receive a church award, a Boy Scout must be of First Class rank or higher; an Explorer must have had at least one year in Exploring.

Application for the award is made to the national Protestant Committee on Scouting and the award is then sent to the minister for presentation at a worship service in the local church. In the Church Awards Program, emphasis is placed on the relationship between the boy and his minister. Thus, the minister's position and personality influence the boy's life. Basic purpose of the program is to help a boy prepare for active church membership.

A PROUD TRADITION — The principles of scouting are basic in the American culture. When a new scout begins his training in a troop, he first learns the proud traditions of the youth organization. Next, he is taught what scouting can do for him. A well-organized program of scouting is not limited to camping and other tests of a youngster's ability to care for himself. A good scout studies scouting, he learns how to identify rank, he may go into any number of specialties, such as radio. Because a part of scouting is in the classroom, sessions such as this are held frequently. God And Country Award Available To Any Boy Of Protestant Faith

The God and Country Award. This church-centered program does not result in a merit badge, but the Scout receives instruction in its requirements from his own minister and receives his award in his own church.

The candidate must fulfill the religious requirements for the award in his own church under the guidance of his own minister. To receive a church award, a Boy Scout must be of First Class rank or higher; an Explorer must have had at least one year in Exploring.

Application for the award is made to the national Protestant Committee on Scouting and the award is then sent to the minister for presentation at a worship service in the local church. In the Church Awards Program, emphasis is placed on the relationship between the boy and his minister. Thus, the minister's position and personality influence the boy's life. Basic purpose of the program is to help a boy prepare for active church membership.

Any boy of Protestant faith who is a registered member of a Boy Scout troop or Explorer post may qualify for a God and Country Award. The troop or Explorer unit need not be sponsored by his own church.

SOMETHING NEW

Scout Magazine Printed In Braille

The Boy Scouts of America recently embarked on a new venture—printing its magazine, "Boys' Life" in Braille.

The new Braille edition dovetails into the Scout program of working with the handicapped and its principle that "every boy should be recognized for what he is able to do and not penalized for what he is unable to do."

There are about 500 troops made up of physically handicapped Scouts and 150 for retarded boys, and in addition there are many handicapped boys in regular units.

In several cities Radio Troops have been organized to reach bedridden and shut-in Scouts. In these units an able-bodied boy acts as a "buddy" Scout to plan and carry out activities with a shut-in Scout.

The mother of a retarded Scout recently wrote to Boy Scout headquarters here to relate how much Scouting had meant to her son.

Wearing a uniform had given him a feeling of belonging to a group, she said, adding that he had been able to memorize only two things in his life—the Lord's Prayer and the Scout Oath.

Troop 40, made up of boys from a rehabilitation center for physically handicapped children in Sioux Falls, S. D., needed money for uniforms. They set out to earn it for themselves by washing cars. Scouts in wheel chairs specialized in washing bumpers, grills and tail lights. Boys on crutches washed the bodies.

One youngster in a new-found burst of confidence, cried, "We wash cars better than anybody in the city."

And in Cedar Bluffs, Nebraska, Scoutmaster Jim Schmidt takes his physically handicapped charges to summer camp where the boys live in tents, swim, ride horseback and go on hikes. Schmidt, who had polio when he was 2, leads his Scouts from a wheelchair.

BOY SCOUT WEEK—Feb. 7-13

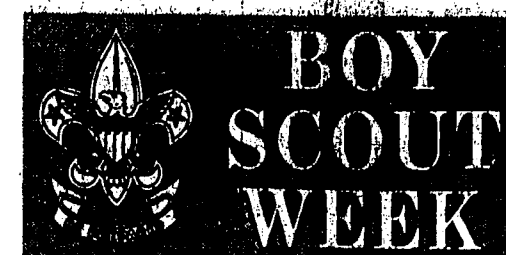

We are proud to be part of the Scouting team!

Scouting is one of the strongest influences for good in the life of a boy. It knows no race or creed or class. It serves rich and poor alike, and its aim is to help each of these boys become the BEST CITIZEN that he can make of himself. The future of America and of the world looks brighter because of the ideals instilled in our young men through their Scouting Work.

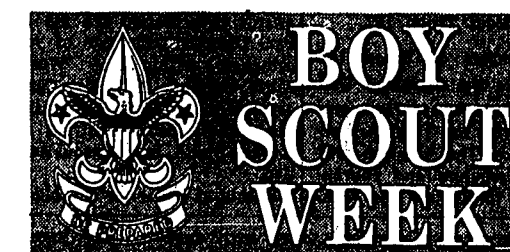

Those who were lucky enough to enjoy Scouting in their own youth know perhaps best of all what the nation owes to the Boy Scouts of America. On their young shoulders will fall the mantle of leadership in days to come. We are thankful for the fine Scout leaders in this area who give their time in training our citizens of tomorrow.

BOY SCOUTS OF AMERICA

Six Troop 167 Scouts Will Get G&C Award

Sunday, February 16, will be a red-letter day in the history of the Iredell Scout District, Triplet Methodist Church and, most especially, Boy Scout Troop 167.

Six members of Troop 167 will receive the coveted G&C and Country Award in ceremonies during the 11 a. m. worship service. The occasion will draw top scouts and churchmen from throughout the area.

The Rev. Ray S. Cody, pastor of Triplet Church, will have charge of the services. Among special guests expected for the awards presentation are the Rev. Paul Duckwall, director of youth activities within the Western North Carolina Methodist Conference; Mitchell Mack, chairman of the Iredell Scout District; and Howard Smith, Iredell scout executive.

Guests of honor for the big day will be the outstanding youngsters and their parents. The G&C and Country Award is not easily come by. It represents years of dedicated work on the part of the scouts, and it implies a rare brand of encouragement on the part of the parents.

Some of the projects that led to the completion of requirements for the G&C Award were joint endeavors, but most were carried out individually by the determined scouts.

Such a cooperative effort was the "Love's Lane" through the cooperation of Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Kerr, Mr. and Mrs. James Kyles, Mr. and Mrs. Grady Corbier, and the pastor, the six boys planted, cultivated and harvested an acre of peanuts. They realized some profit, but the real value of the project was learning to work together.

THE THRILL OF COMPETITION — Scouting is many things, but most of all it's fun. Even work becomes fun when a group of energetic boys do it together. One of the strong points in the youth organization is the opportunities it provides for wholesome boy-versus-boy competition. The youngsters test themselves against each other in many ways, such as at camporee where they stage contests requiring skill in all phases of their training. If organized games are not being conducted, the boys organize their own. While these members of Troop 167 at Central Methodist Church waited their turns to appear before the board of review, they whipped up an Indian wrestling tournament. The four boys were semifinalists. Other members of the unit root for their favorites.

SINCE ESTABLISHMENT IN 1910 Boy Scout Work Supplements Home Effort

The Boy Scouts of America has offered an adventure program for the boys of America and, since its establishment in the United States in 1910, more than 28 million American boys and adult leaders have been influenced by its character-building and citizenship-training program.

As a supplementary program to the nation's basic institutions — the home, the church, and the school — the Boy Scouts of America has the cooperation of religious, civic, business, labor, and educational interests.

In order that the American boy may be able to meet the demands and opportunities in this increasingly complex world, say Scout officials, the program of Scouting is designed to help him be prepared in body, skill, spirit, will, and as a member of a team.

Scouting gives youth opportunities to develop physical fitness, self-reliance, an obligation to God, a sense of personal responsibility, an attitude of service to others, a willingness to share with others, and living the free way of life.

AT programs are made available through selected, competent, trained adult leaders of Cub packs, Boy Scout troops, and Explorer units found in American communities everywhere, under sponsorship of the churches, synagogues, schools, service clubs, veterans' organizations, and numerous other community institutions.

These institutions are chartered by the National Council of the Boy Scouts of America to carry on the program of Scouting for their boys and those of the community.

Cub Scouting is designed to help parents, with their eight, nine, and 10-year-old sons through one of the most vital periods of life. This is the year-round, home-centered program of activities that appeals to a boy of Cub Scout age.

It teaches a boy to do interesting things — handicrafts, collections, games, stunts, nature lore, and hobbies — in his own neighborhood with his parents.

Today there are 1,949 Cub Scouts in 94 packs in the Piedmont Council.

Boy Scouting gives a boy from 11 through 13 an opportunity to get out-of-doors. With his patrol and troop he learns how to camp, to pitch a tent, to make his camp bed, and to cook his supper over a campfire. He learns how to be self-reliant.

Scouting teaches him first aid so that he may be helpful to others and able to take care of himself in times of emergency. He learns to signal a message, make a map, and identify trees.

Scouting gives him training in citizenship, character development, and physical fitness and inspires him to live up to the Scout Oath and Law.

Today there are 5,602 Boy Scouts in 281 troops in the Piedmont Council.

The boy, from 14 on, fast approaching manhood, is thinking seriously about his future, especially his livelihood. What he will do after his school years. He wants to be treated as a young man and be given responsibility for managing his own affairs. He enjoys the company of other fellows of his own age and increasingly seeks the companionship of girls as well.

He is eager to improve his appearance and manner. He still needs the guidance of his parents and of other adults who are able and "willing" to help him in this crucial period of final preparation for self-dependence.

Through Exploring he gets a well-rounded program of industrial, social, service, and vocational activities. The program gives him adventuring in the out-of-doors, social activities, service opportunities, and consideration of his life-work possibilities.

Today there are 454 Explorers in 30 Explorer units in the Council.

Report From The Chairman Mack Spearheads Rebuilding Drive

Contrary to the theory that everything goes naturally downhill after a year, 1963 was not a good year for scouting in the Iredell District.

When charter renewal time rolled around last year, leaders were dismayed to learn that half the county's 30-odd scout units were unable to renew their charters for another year's program.

Several of the casualties were troops, posts and packs that had been regarded as healthy, growing units. The failure of so many units flashed a shock wave through the district organization — and it prompted action.

District Chairman Mitchell Mack views the collapse of so many scout units as a mixed blessing. On the one hand, it has forced the district organization to look at the situation and to make changes. On the other hand, it has forced the district organization to look at the situation and to make changes.

Although the figures for 1963 look very bad, Mack said, "there is much on the positive side of the scouting ledger for the county."

He pointed out that failure of the units alerted the county leadership to the need for more adults in the movement. He also explained the units that survived the breakdown last year now are stronger than ever.

"We've had a lot of individual advancements," Mack said, "which means we still have a solid nucleus of interested youth in the program. The real problem last year was that leadership on the district level wavered a bit."

The district chairman has a two-point platform for the year: First, he feels that the most important job in the scouting movement in the county is to strengthen district operational committees. Secondly, close attention must be given to rebuilding units that faltered last year and now are trying to reactivate.

The beginning of this reorganization movement came with "Operation Rescue," a crash program to pump life into the inactive scout units. The project was less than a complete success, but it achieved much of its goals, Mack felt, by focusing attention on the status of scouting in the county.

"The men who worked in 'Operation Rescue' did a marvelous job," the chairman said, "in diagnosing the failures of the units, and in directing reorganization work."

The impact of "Operation Rescue" was felt favorably in South Iredell.

First Baptist Church, which already supports strong Troop 256, has organized a Cub pack. The new unit now is going strong.

Troop 255 has been reactivated at Broad Street Methodist Church. Adults in the church have rallied behind Scoutmaster Bud Hartman to get the unit going again.

First Presbyterian Church, which has Troop 164, now has reorganized a Cub pack. The pack at this church disbanded, but interest

A BOY AND HIS HEROES

One of the keys to a boy's character is his choice of heroes.

For a hero is more than a portrait on the wall. A hero is an ideal—a blueprint of greatness.

And where does a boy find his heroes?

He finds them in books and on the playing field... in his school, his family, his Church.

The Church's contribution to a child's gallery of heroes is unique.

Bible study and religious education not only introduce the boy to the greatest lives ever lived... but they teach him how to build the same quality of heroism into his own life.

New Types Of Watermelons,
Cukes Listed

A disease resistant cucumber called "Polaris" and a succulent box type watermelon named "Sugar Baby" are among several new varieties recommended for North Carolina gardens and commercial vegetable farms this year.

The Agricultural Extension Service at North Carolina State has issued an updated list of vegetable varieties recommended for 1964 on the basis of trial and pot performance.

Some of the varieties have been tested and harvested in the state the last one or two years but haven't appeared on the recommended list.

Among these is the slicing type cucumber "Polaris," a resistant to downy and powdery mildew and as some resistance to anthracnose. It is much like the Ashley appearance, but is more blunt in the ends.

The "Polaris" is being recommended for trial commercial plantings at this stage. The Sugar Baby ice-box watermelon tastes as good as it sounds, is being recommended for home gardens and small commercial plantings in the Coastal Plain and Piedmont.

The melon is small, round with thin, hard dark green rind. The flesh is red.

The Sugar Baby is susceptible to wilt and anthracnose. It should be planted following melons or other cucurbits.

Also on the list of new Extension Service recommendations is "Pathway 29 brocoli." This variety is favored because it matures more rapidly than some of the other varieties, thus making it more suitable for a fall crop.

These and other varieties have been added or substituted on the recommended list. This information is in the form of Leaflet No. 82 entitled "Recommended Vegetable Varieties" is available at county extension offices. It also may be obtained by writing the Agricultural Extension Service, N. C. State, Raleigh, N. C., and requesting it by name and number.

SOIL AND WATER CONSERVATION

By W. M. BEARD
Work Unit Conservationist

Since 1913 the people of the Third Creek Watershed area have been trying in an organized way to prevent flood damage in their bottom lands. However, little progress was made until 1909 when the Pilot Watershed Project was started. Fifteen floodwater retaining structures, along with stream channel improvement, were proposed to sufficiently reduce the flood hazard. The first structure was completed in November, 1904. To date nine of the fifteen structures have been completed. The stream channel was cleared in 1904. In 1905, but has not been maintained due to insufficient funds. But flooding has been greatly reduced, as the two following examples will verify.

1. Before construction of dam and channel work, bottom lands would flood about four times every year. Bottoms stayed flooded long enough to drown crops in the spring. Fall floods sometimes prevented machine harvesting of crops. Hay baled and ready for storage, was swept away by floodwaters. One farmer lost about 600 bushels of corn during a single year. But since flood preventive action has been taken, there has been only one damaging flood. The bottoms still flood occasionally, but the waters recede much faster than before, therefore not damaging crops to any extent. (The floodwaters do not recede quite as quickly now as they did when the stream channel was cleared. The banks need to be cleared again.)

2. The following is an example of how one dam has benefited bottom lands below. The permanent pool covers 7.4 acres and has a drainage area of 1,124 acres. One of the 1902 count of 6,851 in north-central North Carolina, the 1903 average was 1,203 compared with 5,136 in 1902.

Costal Plain farmers, USDA says, are not quite as lucky. Weevil damage in 1903 was relatively light. Entomologists say that low weevil numbers and timely control efforts helped keep crop losses down.
